INTRODUCTION

IN 1896, when Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, a member of the committee on Town History, volunteered to write a history of the Town of Cohasset, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Davenport were engaged by the committee to write a Genealogy of Cohasset Families.

The narrative history was completed and published in 1898, but the genealogy requiring infinitely more research, it was not possible to publish it with the earlier volume, and it was not until October, 1908, that the book was ready for the press.

In the ten years that have elapsed since the publication of the history, there have been some changes in the town, and the committee on Town History have taken advantage of the opportunity to bring the History up to date. In the narrative history subjects were omitted which might properly have been included; we have therefore added a number of chapters containing matter which it is believed is of sufficient importance to be preserved.

We wish to acknowledge our obligation to those who at their own expense have furnished half-tones for many of the illustrations, and especially to Mr. Russell B. Tower, who has made from old oil paintings several negatives from which half-tones have been made.

PREFACE

THIS genealogical record of the families of Cohasset has been prepared at the request of the Committee on Town History, and is printed as the result of the vote of the town, March 3, 1908.

It was found very unsatisfactory to begin with the date 1770, when the second precinct of Hingham became the town of Cohasset, and the rule adopted was to take each family as soon as it became resident upon land now included in this town. Besides this "Rocky Nook" was included as being at one time a part of Cohasset. The work is brought down to the close of 1907, with as much added for 1908 as could be obtained up to the time of going to press.

The basis of the work is the town and church records, and these are supplemented by those of other towns, printed and unprinted, and other genealogical records, and by family records, deeds and wills. As there was no record of deaths kept from 1747 to 1798, and Joel Willcutt's diary begins only in 1791, the date of decease of many prominent persons is conspicuously wanting. For this period the cemetery inscriptions are the chief authority, but there is no record of the names of the many placed in tombs.

In early years baptisms rather than births were recorded. In some instances these took place on the very day of birth, but it was more often the following Sunday.

Much help has been derived from the Hingham Genealogies in writing out our families before 1770, but all has been compared with our records, and in many cases it has been possible to make corrections or to add new matter. Only residents of the town (the second precinct of Hingham before 1770) are included, and those only who appear in some way on the records.

One or two exceptions have been made when these seemed justified.

The method of arrangement used is that indorsed by the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and is essentially the same as that of the Hingham Genealogies. Whenever possible the line of ancestors going back to the "emigrant" is given, numbered, in parenthesis after the name of the head of each family. Where this cannot be done the names of his father and mother are given in the parenthesis, sometimes followed by those of grandparents. The head of each family has his own number, and this number, after number one, is found at the left of his name in his father's family, except in one or two cases where the father was not of this town, yet closely related to others here.

In early times the spelling of Christian names was so varied that it has been thought better to enter them as found. Names of those born within the last fifty years or so have been given in the generally received form, so far as practicable. Much assistance has been received from members of the families given, but in one or two instances it has come too late for use. It must be remembered that authorities often differ in the matter of a date, and in such a case the compiler must use his judgment as best he can.

Double dating was used up to 1752 for the dates between 1 Jan. and 25 Mar., as the year legally began on the latter date. For instance, Rev. Nehemiah Hobart began to live in his house "Jan. 20, 1724-5." His first child was born Nov. 6, 1725; that is, the November following. In bringing down the dates of the first half of the eighteenth century (until September, 1752) to the present time, eleven days should be added. Thus the two-hundredth anniversary of the raising of Parson Hobart's house will occur on Oct. 26, 1922.

When giving the public offices, held by individuals, their election at town meeting was taken as proof of their serving. In a few instances they were excused and did not hold office, but reference to the note by Mr. N. B. Tower under "Town Officers" will lead to the needed corrections.

We wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to Mr. George

Lincoln of Hingham for the help his work has given us, and we owe thanks to Mr. Wilford J. Litchfield and to Miss Ella Bates for assistance in tracing Scituate connections.

There are many names and dates wanting that time and further research may discover, but it has been our earnest endeavor to make our work as complete as possible.

GEORGE LYMAN DAVENPORT.

ELIZABETH OSGOOD DAVENPORT.

BATES (BATE, BEAT).

Of the grandsons of Clement, who settled in Hing. in 1635, two, Joseph and Joshua, sons of Clement's son Joseph, took up their abode in the sec. pre. some years before 1700. Later their nephew David, son of their brother Caleb, followed them. From these three are descended most of the Bates families of Coh. A few other descendants of Clement, one family from his brother Edward, and several, not, thus far, traceable to their emigrant ancestor, add to the number bearing the ancient name of Bate, or Bates.

JOSEPH BATES

1. JOSEPH<sup>3</sup> (Joseph<sup>2</sup> Clement<sup>1</sup>), b. in Hing., 28 Sept., 1660; m. 3 Jan., 1683-4, Mary, dau. of Samuel and Martha Lincoln. She was b. in Hing., 27 Mar., 1662, and d. In 1683 he purchased of his uncle Samuel for £10-10 sh. half of lot 68, 1st div. Conehassit, just south of Deerhill Lane, now Sohier St., of which his father owned the other half. After his father's death in 1706 he owned the whole lot, and he seems to have built a house upon the eastern end of it just before his death, but not to have occupied it. He lived on what is now Cedar St., near the present Hing. line, and in his will leaves to his wife Mary, after other bequests, "the west-end of his dwelling-house during the time she remains his widow." Legacies were given to his three daughters, and his sons Joseph and Jonathan were to divide between them the greater part of his real estate. One of the seven men who with Mr. Hobart, first signed the covenant of the 1st. Ch. "A man of some distinction from his piety and useful acquirements"—(Rev. Jacob Flint).

A leader in the fishing industries of the pre. of Coh. he owned the first wharf which was taxed (1754), and he was a large owner of real estate. He inherited the greater part of his father's property; in fact he is taxed for it in 1749, the year before his father dies, the latter having only "non rateable" poll-tax.

On the 3 July, 1765, he gives a mortgage-deed to Josiah Quincy of Braintree, to three pieces of property, the first of which he styles "all that my now dwelling-house and 22 acres of land adjoining",  $\frac{1}{2}$  acre which Samuel had before sold to his son Joseph excepted. The same day John Quincy transfers it to Isaac Lincoln and three others, and 1 April, 1772, these joint owners, for £500 lawful money, sell it to John Gillespie of Boston, merchant. Samuel lived after 1772, according to the tax list, in the house he had bought of Moses Cushing, the old Stephen Stodder house on the Common. Member Com. of Inspection, 1774.

JOSHUA BATES.

1. JOSHUA<sup>3</sup> (Joseph<sup>2</sup> Clement<sup>1</sup>), b. in Hing. 14 Aug., 1671; m. 15 Jan., 1695-6, Rachel, dau. of Ibrook and Margaret (Hardin) Tower. She was b. in Hing. 16 Mar., 1674-5, and d. before 1757. He d. April, 1757. Member of 1st School Com. 1728. One of three to make plan for new meetinghouse in 1746, the others being James Stutson and John Stephenson. It seems certain that his house was built in 1695, before the first child was born, on the west side of what is now South Main St., on lot 40 of the 1st div. In 1711 he was taxed for 1 house, 2 acres farm, 6 pasture. In his will, probated 14 Oct., 1757, Joshua Bates gives to his dau. Bathsheba Perry "half an acre of land where her house now stands"; to his son Joshua, land in the 3d div., "where his house now stands"; to Solomon the lot "where his house now stands," this being near Bathsheba's in lot 19 on South Main St., a little south of Beechwood St.; to Jacob "all my homestead, housing, and land adjoining, with shop and tools." The tax lists show that Jacob lived in the house with his father. In 1749, Joshua was taxed for  $\frac{1}{2}$  dwelling house,  $\frac{1}{2}$  acre orchard,  $\frac{1}{2}$  acre tillage, 6 pasture, 4 slaves, 2 cows. His house remained in possession of his descendants till about 1900, but is now owned and occupied by James Dean. It is doubtless the oldest house in town.

LITCHFIELD.

Of the many descendants in Cohasset of Lawrence Litchfield, who settled in Scit. shortly before 1646, the greater number are of the family of his great-great-grandson James<sup>5</sup>, who came to the Beechwoods about 1760. A few families are derived from Capt. Daniel<sup>5</sup>, of Scit., a younger brother of James<sup>5</sup>, and others from a still younger brother, Dea. Israel<sup>5</sup>, also of Scit. Another group of families originates in Lothrop<sup>5</sup>, a cousin of these brothers. Besides these there are one or two, no doubt of the same stock, which cannot thus far be rightly placed.

OAKES.

EDWARD<sup>1</sup>, b. in Eng., 1604; came to Cambridge, 1640, with wife Jane and two sons, Urian and Edward. Urian<sup>2</sup>, b. in Eng. 1631; grad. H. C. 1649; was settled as minister in Titchfield, Eng., 1650, and in Cambridge, Mass., 1671. Elected fourth president of Har. Coll., 1675; d. 1681. Of Edward<sup>2</sup> but little is known. He was a lieutenant in King Philip's War.

THOMAS<sup>2</sup> (Edward<sup>1</sup>), b. in Cambridge, 1644; Har. Coll., 1662; settled as physician in Boston; was representative 1689; went to

Eng. as agent for Mass. and assisted in procuring the new charter. His wife, Martha——, d. 19 April, 1719, aged 70 yrs., in Cambridge. He d. in Wellfleet, 15 July, 1719, aged 75 yrs. Josiah<sup>3</sup>, youngest son of Dr. Thomas<sup>2</sup>, was b. in Boston, 3 May, 1689; Har. Coll., 1708; was settled in ministry at Eastham, where he m. 10 Aug., 1724, Margaret, dau. of Samuel and Margaret (Johnson) Haugh. He d. at Wellfleet, 21 Jan., 1732.

There is much circumstantial evidence to show, though no record of it has been found, that his widow, Margaret, married, about 1733, James Stutson of Hing., sec. pre. The youngest child of James and Margaret was named Atherton Haugh. Of the four children of Rev. Josiah and Margaret (Haugh) Oakes one had died in Eastham; the others, Joshua Doane, Urian, and Samuel, were doubtless brought up in Hing., sec. pre., with their half brothers and sisters.

1. JAMES<sup>4</sup> (James<sup>3</sup> Benjamin<sup>2</sup> Robert<sup>1</sup>), b. in Boston, 11 Sept., 1699; m. abt. 1733, Margaret —. There is convincing circumstantial evidence that she was Margaret (Haugh) Oakes, dau. of Samuel Haugh and widow of Rev. Josiah Oakes, but no record of her second marriage has been found, and there is no record in Coh. either of her death or of James Stutson's. In the Central Cemetery their children are buried beside those of Josiah and Margaret Oakes.

The first mention of James Stutson in records of Hing., sec. pre., is as follows: "12 Aug., 1724 — voated that Jeams Stutson should have one pound six shillings for work done in the meeting-house about ye deacons seat, and making a closet under the pulpit and finding a lock and putting it on closet door." In 1749 he had the largest farm in the Beechwoods, but in 1750 he owned the land on Main St. south of Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, and prob. lived in the house, which (enlarged) is now Dr. H. E. Fernald's. Before 1763, he built a house on what is now Elm St., where he probably died in 1772. "Farmer," "housewright," and "shipwright." He was one of the builders of the new meeting-house in 1747, and purchased the old one, the timbers and panels of which he used in building several Coh. houses.

* Nichols Tower (born 1787, died 1866) was an instance of a man who helped to make Cohasset a town in which its inhabitants could earn their living. His father, Levi Tower, had been one of the first shipwrights and vessel owners in Cohasset, and Nichols early in life became a vessel owner in partnership with his father, and later owned for himself and in connection with others many of the vessels built at Cohasset.

He commanded at times some of the vessels which he owned, and Frank Pratt speaks of him as captain of the schooner Tower on a fishing trip. He paid particular attention to the wrecking business, raising or salving many vessels wrecked on the Massachusetts coast.

John Henry Cook was a member of his crew on two occasions when expeditions were made to the Spanish Main to recover treasure lying in vessels sunk there.

* James C. Doane, known as Esquire or Squire Doane, was a gentleman of the old school, wearing the old-fashioned swallow-tail coat to the day of his death.

In addition to the town offices held by him, he was one of the county commissioners for some years, Doane street, running from Beechwood to Hingham, being named in remembrance of his services in this capacity.

Many deeds and wills made before 1860 are found in his handwriting.

* Captain Martin Lincoln's title came to him from the militia and not from the sea, for he was a farmer and tilled the land which his ancestors had tilled from 1750. The occupation of farming was his daily occupation from boyhood until within twenty years of his death.

In his younger days he had the monopoly of such simple law business as could be transacted by the country justice of the peace. He was at one time president of the Cohasset Mutual Fire Insurance Company, but did no other insurance business. In the last years of his life he was president of the Cohasset Savings Bank.

He was a man of good judgment, conservative in his ideas and was a citizen who enjoyed the confidence and respect of his fellow townsmen, who elected him to serve as their representative twice in the Massachusetts Legislature, as well as on the Board of Selectmen for many years. Under his supervision was built that portion of South Main Street running across the meadow by the Catholic Church, known for many years as the "New Road." He also straightened Beechwood Street at what is known as the "Point of Rocks."

Martin Luther King

During the Civil War he was active in recruiting. A man of very few words, and those uttered with the utmost moderation, he seemed to typify in his dignified bearing the Puritan, of which type he was the last representative. Albeit of a disposition which did not encourage familiarity, he was not without a sense of humor, as is shown by the following anecdote related of him. At one time at a meeting of the Selectmen for making up the annual accounts for the town book it was suggested by him that James H. Nichols must have a bill against the Town which had not been presented, namely for "Removing Snow from South Main Street." As Mr. Nichols had during the year married Miss Ruth Snow, of South Main Street, and removed her to his home on the Common, the application of the witticism was easily perceived.

* Levi N. Bates, who was a member of the School Committee for twenty-eight years, brought to that office a mind better stored with learning than is customarily found in the person of a country storekeeper. He early in life devoted himself to the study of the French language and became proficient in its use, both in conversation and reading. He organized classes of young people, whom he taught without pay, and by his influence had the study of this language carried to a point in the Cohasset High School further than was then pursued in many colleges. His influence in this respect is still felt in the High School course.

He was also proficient in the use of the Spanish and Portuguese languages.

He was a lover of music, as was natural in the son of the man who made the first two pianos owned in Cohasset.

He also was an amateur in the fine art of painting, and did work in this line which was not without merit. The flower garden more than the kitchen garden appealed to him. In short his was one of those fine grained natures which took pleasure in the aesthetic side of life.

He was the village apothecary for years and was the treasurer of the Cohasset Savings Bank up to the time of his death.

* Edward Tower, while he served the town in the different offices enumerated above, will be best remembered as a member of the School Committee, of which he was a member twenty-three years, from the time when the schools were conducted under the district system up to the time when something like a system of graded schools was being evolved. A school master himself when a young man, he understood the needs of the schools and was especially well versed in everything pertaining to their physical welfare.

He acted as postmaster for many years in the northerly end of the building now occupied by Norris Brothers, and in addition did what surveying was called for in the town.

* Abraham H. Tower, known as Captain Tower, or as Captain Abraham Hubbard, was one of the solid citizens of the town. The pronunciation of his middle name Hobart as Hubbard, which was the only pronunciation used by people of his own age, was not incorrect, but was the pronunciation brought over from England, where it is so pronounced to-day. And Captain Tower served as a link between the old and the new in other ways than in the pronunciation of his name.

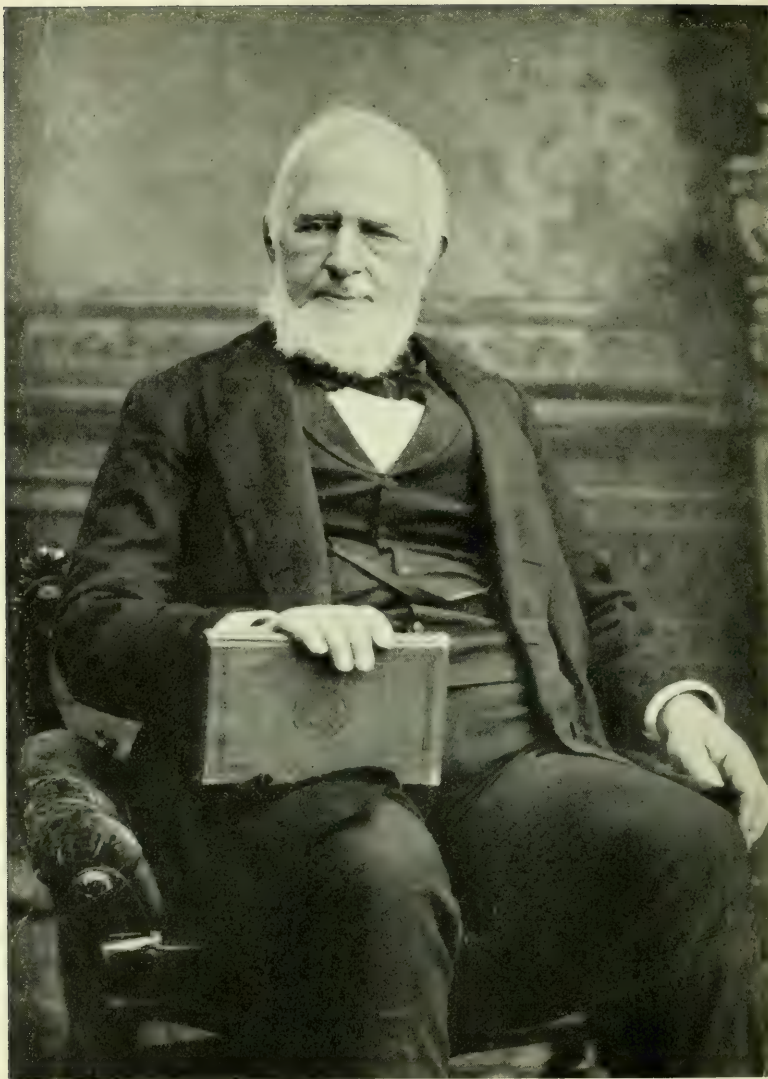

In the old meeting house he was always found in his pew on Sunday, carrying out the old fashioned custom of standing during the prayer. And in his house on the plain the ample fireplaces served their purpose of giving heat long after they had been bricked up in other houses in the town, while every year his wood lots furnished a goodly store of wood for these same fireplaces, which was piled in the yard by the side of the house.

Early in his life he followed in the footsteps of his father as a vessel owner, and almost the last vessel built in Cohasset, the Charlotte, was owned by him. Many of the vessels owned, or partly owned by him, were engaged wholly or in part in foreign commerce, but many of them, and in the latter part of his life, all of them, were fishing vessels.

A huge pile of cord wood placed on the Common opposite his house, and reaching to the foot of the hill, was consumed every summer in these fishing vessels.

He also conducted a large farm and brought up in his family many boys who served their time on his vessels or on the farm. For some years he was president of the savings bank and of the fire insurance company.

* Joseph Osgood (born 1815, died 1898) for nearly sixty years was an important factor in shaping and influencing the lives of the citizens of Cohasset. In the year 1839 and 1840, while a student at the Harvard Divinity School, he taught in the little schoolhouse on the rocks, where now stands St. Stephen's Church. He often said in later years that on his first visit to Cohasset, as the stage-coach which conveyed him from the Hingham boat rose over the hill leading on to the Common, he thought, — "This is a town where I should like to spend the rest of my days." That exactly this thing happened shows the peculiar disposition of the man, which enabled him to remain in a small country town for nearly sixty years, occupying positions, the retention of which depended upon the whims of the populace. During the early years of his pastorate, there was no Catholic church in the town, and the Irish and Portuguese found in him the counselor and friend ordinarily sought for in the priest of the parish.

For forty-five years, either as member of the school-committee or as superintendent of schools, he had a powerful influence in shaping the policy of the public school system in Cohasset. Even in his old age he was anxious that the Cohasset schools should have the benefit of whatever was newest and most advanced in methods of teaching.

When he entered on his parochial duties as minister of the First Parish the feeling of bitterness engendered by the secession from his church of a number of families for the formation of another church was still strong, but long before his death that feeling had entirely passed away; a result brought about as much by his attitude as any one thing. The writer well remembers an incident that occurred when, between the pastorates of Mr. Savage and Mr. Biglow of the Second Church, that parish was left without a minister, that he entered the vestry of the latter church on the occasion of the annual parish supper and found Dr. Osgood seated in the midst of the assembled company, his venerable white head and beaming smile seeming to bestow a benediction on all. This popularity was gained without the use of any other means than that of a good life simply lived in the midst of his townspeople.

incumbent. As a young man he learned the trade of stair builder and worked in the store of his father, Caleb Lothrop. For many years he was custom house officer for the port of Cohasset and at one time acted in that capacity as well for the ports of Hingham and Hull. He was justice of the peace and drew deeds and mortgages and wills. He also acted as executor of wills and administrator of estates.

He was secretary of the Cohasset Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and after the death of Captain Martin Lincoln was president of the Cohasset Savings Bank. He also represented Cohasset in the State Legislature. But he will be best remembered as selectman, assessor and overseer of the poor, and moderator of the town meetings. There is no question but that his services to the Town in these various capacities were notable. At the time of his death he was a member of the board of County Commissioners of Norfolk County.

He enjoyed the confidence of the summer residents and it was largely through his exertions that the corporation tax of the West End Street Railway was secured for Cohasset in 1886 and until its final distribution.

While keeping a watchful eye on the appropriations of the town in order that the tax rate might be kept at the lowest point consistent, he was always in favor of liberal appropriations for those things which tended to advance Cohasset and make it a desirable town to live in — good schools, good roads, etc.

As moderator he was unique, a law unto himself. His administration of the office was not according to Cushing's Manual, but according to the Manual of J. Q. A. Lothrop, and while this often aroused strenuous opposition, his conduct of the office was so satisfactory to the majority of the voters that he was re-elected year after year. He knew every voter in town and could call him by name as he approached the ballot box.

As school committee man he also rendered efficient service to the town.

* Abraham H. Tower, Jr., best known as Hobart Tower, held the position of Town Treasurer for a longer time than any other incumbent of that office. His continuous re-election to the office showed the confidence reposed in him by his fellow citizens. As a boy he obtained his business training in the office of the Revere Copper Company in Boston, and later in life carried on, in connection with his brother Newcomb, the fishing business inherited from his father, to which was added the coal and lumber business.

GLEANINGS FROM THE TOWN RECORDS.

APRIL 26, 1770.—“The Second Precinct in Hingham was by an Act of the Great and General Court incorporated into a separate District by the name of Cohasset.” (The name “District” was later changed to “Town.”)

MAY 7, 1770.—At this, the first town meeting of the Inhabitants of Cohasset, there were chosen in addition to the Town Clerk, three Selectmen who also acted as Overseers of the Poor, three Assessors and a Treasurer, the following officers, viz: — two Wardens, two Constables, two Fence Viewers, two Hog-reeves, a Clerk of the Market, one Field Driver, one Surveyor of Wood, Plank, Timber and Shingles, one Culler of Hoops and Staves, one Deer-reeve, one Sealer of Leather, one Culler of Fish and Packer of Mackerel and four Surveyors of Highways. (A Tythingman was first chosen in 1771.)

At the next meeting, May 15, 1770, thirty pounds was raised for use of the School or Schools the current year; a committee of three was chosen to provide Schoolmasters; 170 pounds, in addition to the thirty pounds above mentioned, was raised for the Rev. Mr. Brown’s salary and other necessary charges of said District the current year. Also, voted, “that the swine may go at large the present year.”

At the third and last meeting of Cohasset’s first year of existence, held Dec. 20, 1770, it was voted “that every child that cometh to the reading and writing school till wood is wanted, shall bring to said school a foot of wood, or one shilling & sixpence in money to the School master to purchase wood.”

MARCH 4, 1776. — A committee of Inspection, Safety, etc., consisting of nine persons, was chosen.

JUNE 14, 1776. — “Then the question was put whether if the Hon’ble American Congress should declare the United Colonys independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain, they will support it with their lives & fortunes. Passed in the affirmative.”

JUNE 25, 1777. — “Then chose Josiah Oakes to procure and lay before Court the evidence that may be had of the inimical disposition of any person towards this or any of the United States of America.”

MARCH 8, 1819. — "Voted, that the Selectmen be authorized to purchase a Hearse for the decent burial of the dead."

MARCH 21, 1821. — "Voted, that the Selectmen be authorized to build a Magazine for the safe keeping of gunpowder, &c." (This magazine, locally called the "Powder House," a small brick building, was located upon the ledge between what is now Pleasant street and James' Lane.)

APRIL 1, 1822. — "Voted to accept the use of the stove in the Meeting House" (which had been purchased by individuals), "and keep it in repair."

APRIL 4, 1825. — "Voted, that if any individuals see fit to open the road over Garnett's Run, so called, that the town direct the surveyors to make the road." (Now Brook street.)

APRIL 3, 1826. — "Voted to grant Thomas Oakes permission to ring the Meeting House bell at 12 o'clock at noon and 9 o'clock in the evening." (Mr. Oakes was totally blind, and it is related of him that he would, without assistance, leave his house, which stood where Dr. Wentworth's house now is, and walk up the street or sidewalk till opposite the Meeting House, cross over, mount the stone door-step of the porch, with the key in his hand, and insert it directly into the keyhole as neatly as if possessed of good sight.)

MARCH 12, 1827. — A committee of nine persons was chosen "for the purpose of purchasing a place for the accommodation of the Poor, provided two-thirds of the Committee agree." (The committee agreed, a purchase was made and the newly purchased Almshouse, on what is now King street, was first occupied as such in 1827.)

APRIL 6, 1829. — "Voted to grant individuals leave to set out trees on the Plain under the direction of the Selectmen."

NOV. 7, 1848. — Chose a committee of three, Thomas Smith, Zaccheus Rich and Samuel Nichols, "to procure a Fire Engine for the town."

MARCH 4, 1850. — "Voted to provide the Constables with a Pole for their badge of office."

Also "Voted that the Selectmen be instructed to purchase for the preservation of the Town Records and other valuable papers a Safe."

MARCH 10, 1857. — "Voted, that the Selectmen be authorized to sell the Academy at public auction, to be removed on or before the first of July, and a Committee of seven be chosen to erect on the site a building suitable for a town hall and a high school, to be completed on or before Nov. 1st." 196 yeas to 45 nays.

(The old Academy was bought by Mr. Abraham H. Tower and moved across the back land to its present location on what is now Beach st. and converted into a dwelling house. It is now owned by Mr. Daniel N. Tower. The present Town Hall was erected during the same year, 1857, upon the site of the old building.)

JUNE 14, 1861. — Voted, that the Town appropriate a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars for the procuring and erecting a Flag Staff on the Common for the reception of the Flag presented to the Town by William B. Johnson, Esq., and that said Staff be erected on the Common between the Pond and the Unitarian Meeting House nearly in front of the Town Hall.

(The Staff was duly erected and the Flag unfurled therefrom on the Fourth day of July, 1861, with appropriate ceremonies, under the direction of a Committee of fifteen chosen by the Town.)

For further items of interest reference may be made to the Annual publications of the Town since the year 1861.

NOTE. — The following explanation will account for certain discrepancies which probably exist in four instances between the genealogical records prepared by Mrs. Davenport and the foregoing list of Town Officers, namely:

In 1796 Elisha Doane was chosen Selectman in place of Jerom Stephenson who refused to serve.

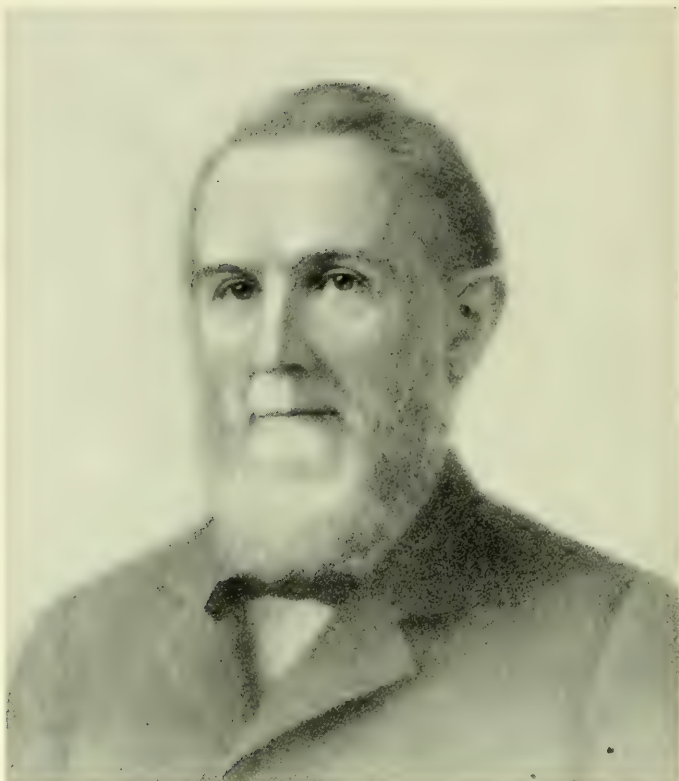

In 1804 Job Turner was chosen Treasurer in place of Zealous Bates who was excused from serving.

In 1827 Samuel Bates was chosen Treasurer in place of Caleb Lothrop who declined to serve.

In 1834 Levi N. Bates was chosen Treasurer in place of Caleb Lothrop who declined to serve.

MUSICAL ASSOCIATIONS OF COHASSET.

BY BURGESS C. TOWER.

THERE seems to be no record of any organized musical society in Cohasset previous to the formation of the Atlantic Musical Association (except the church choirs with accompanying instruments), and the brief and necessarily incomplete account of that organization, as given in this article, is compiled chiefly from recollections of surviving members and from a few short newspaper items.

The prime mover in band and orchestra organizations of this town was Edward E. Tower. He was born in Cohasset in 1834, and his intense interest in promoting musical affairs from the amateur's standpoint covered a period of over forty years. His enthusiasm continued from early boyhood to the last year of his life.

Capt. Henry J. Hallgreen, who had lived in Cohasset for a short time when a boy, and who later became intimate with Edward E. Tower, when both as young men were commencing their business careers in Boston, has kindly furnished an account of the first bands with which they were both connected. It will be noted that among the original members, William W. Lothrop, Benjamin Snow Joy, and Benjamin F. Smith were also Cohasset boys. It may be of interest to know that Captain Hallgreen at the beginning of the Civil War was with the Massachusetts 2d Batt. Infantry, stationed at Fort Warren, and was the originator of the setting of the words "John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave" to an old gospel tune. This was taken up by Gilmore's Band, and immediately became one of our best known patriotic songs. A detailed account of this song may be found in Elson's "History of American Music," which can be procured at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Captain Hallgreen's story is given in full.

HISTORY OF THE TREMONT SERENADE BAND.

About 1852 there lived at the old north end of Boston, three close friends and chums, who might have been seen daily from April 'till October enjoying a swim at the marine railway; Geo. Beals Willcutt, who lived with his parents in Salutation Street, Edw. E. Tower of same residence, and yours truly, Henry J. Hallgreen of Tileston Street. I began about this time a course of lessons on the violin, with the celebrated John Holloway, author of "Wood Up." Tower liked the idea and at once procured a fiddle, and I brought my lessons and exercises down to Willcutt's as fast as I received them. He progressed rapidly and conceived the idea of a serenade band. We got William W. Lothrop and Benjamin Snow Joy interested, and branched out as the Tower-Hallgreen Serenade Band, with an idea of picnic party music as follows: Tower, Violin primo, Hallgreen, Viola, Joy, Violin secundo, and Benj. F. Smith, Bass Cornet. We had hardly begun when the irrepressible E. E. T. thought a real orchestral brass band would be about the proper thing, consequently we changed over. Edward got an E $\flat$  cornet, I took up the B $\flat$ , Henry A. Lyford and his brother Thomas J. joined, and chose E $\flat$  and Alto horn; Edwin Emerson and Philip Wyatt took Tenor, B. F. Smith, 1st Bass, Wm. H. Lowery and Allen P. Boyce took up Tenor and 2nd Bass.

You must remember they were all without previous practice or knowledge of their instrument. We later engaged J. D'Anguerra as Band teacher, to teach us as a Band. We used the Lyford carpenter shop in Barrett St. for Band room, and made great proficiency in our various parts. Antonio D'Anguerra, son of our teacher, who was a pretty good player, joined to play B $\flat$  cornet.

Our Band had grown, and now consisted of the following members as the Tremont Serenade Band.

Edward E. Tower, First E $\flat$ , Leader.

Henry A. Lyford, Second E $\flat$ .

Henry J. Hallgreen, First B $\flat$ .

Antonio D'Anguerra, B $\flat$ .

Thomas J. Lyford, Alto horn.

J. Thos. Baldwin, Alto horn.

Philip Wyatt, Tenor.

Wm. H. Lowery, Tenor.

Edwin Emerson, Trombone.

Benj. F. Smith, First Bass.

Allen P. Boyce, Second Bass.

Marshall P. Wild, Bass Drum.

We serenaded friends in Boston, notably Alderman Edward A. White, who married John Simmons' daughter, and became manager of the immense Simmons estate. We visited Cohasset about as fast as we learned a new piece. Later we were given a room in the Cooper Street Armory, where we became acquainted with the American Artillery, Cowdin Artillery, and other companies in the Armory. We played for them on their parades, which came pretty often in those days: on one occasion the American Artillery went to Stoneham, we were caught in a furious rain storm and all hands deserted to the nearest barn. Our last band room was on Atkinson St. (now Congress St.). On our parades we hired Sam'l C. Perkins, a band leader and composer, to assist on the leading E♭ cornet, and occasionally Geo. B. Morse on the B♭; he belonged to the Chelsea Brass Band. We were broken up at last by having too many engagements, three for one day, of which we accepted the Christ Church picnic, after which we split up. Tower, myself, Lyford and Smith decided to stick to business, as we had reached the serenade limit. D'Anguerra, Baldwin, Boyce and Lowery joined other bands and continued in music for years. Thus ended the old band from which we had all derived much comfort and many happy days.

HENRY J. HALLGREEN.

After the Civil War had ended, there was great demand for patriotic music, and local military bands were formed in many towns. In Cohasset a few of the young men decided to take up, for recreation, study on various brass instruments, and Mr. Tower was invited to instruct them. Other members were added and a permanent organization effected, the name Atlantic Musical Association having been adopted. A set of band instruments was purchased, and loaned to the members, many of whom later bought their own instruments.

In 1867 a Constitution and set of By-laws were printed, to which was added the list of officers and members, stating the instrument each played. This list, together with the Preamble of the Constitution may be of sufficient interest to be quoted.

PREAMBLE.

As proficiency was acquired, numerous requests for the services of the band at various entertainments and gatherings were made, and a search through the files of the Hingham Journal gives us brief particulars of a few of these occasions.

Music was furnished at installation of officers of Konohasset Lodge A. F. & A. M., on July 4, 1866. In the following September a serenade was given to Major William B. Johnson. In connection with this last statement it may be well to add that serenading seems to have been a decidedly popular part of the band's duties at that time. Newly married couples were usually the recipients of this compliment from the Association. Among those so favored were Messrs. John Bates, Jan. 30, 1870, A. A. Lawrence, Oliver A. Brown.

In March, 1868, a concert by the Association was given at Hingham, under the auspices of the Agricultural Society. Miss Mary Percival (Mrs. Loriman S. Brigham) and a quartet, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Louis N. Lincoln, Mrs. Helen Tower, and Mr. Caleb F. Nichols, assisted. According to the newspaper account of this affair, gratifying skill was shown in the rendering of the several selections.

On May 3 the band played at the first anniversary of the organization of Minot's Light Lodge of Good Templars, and in the following July played at a strawberry festival in Hingham.

One year later, in July, 1869, an outdoor concert was given at Fountain Square, Hingham, by the Atlantic Musical Association and Hingham Brass Band consolidated, and after the concert a collation was served by the Hingham musicians. At midnight several prominent Hingham residents were serenaded by the Cohasset Band.

On May 7, 1870, the Centennial Anniversary of Cohasset was celebrated, and our band took a prominent part in the programme, beginning with a concert at 7 A.M., on the Common, furnishing the music for the procession which was formed at the depot on arrival of Governor Claflin, with state officials and other distinguished guests.

At about this time a small orchestra was organized of band members, which gave dances and promenade concerts, to raise money for new instruments and music.

Caleb Lothrop entertained the band on the occasion of his twenty-first birthday, and a pleasant evening was spent with music and refreshments. From this time until 1877 little data appear to be on record concerning the Association. Probably during these years chorus singing proved a greater attraction, as will be seen below. In 1877 the Atlantic Musical Association was reorganized, Edward E. Tower again made its Director, and on Thanksgiving Evening a successful promenade concert was given at the Town Hall by the band, assisted by vocal talent.

It was in the early eighties that the band furnished music for the Scituate Grand Army Post, Decoration Day, on two or three occasions. In later years, as will be seen, it formed the nucleus of the Cohasset Musical Association.

COHASSET CHORAL UNION.

It has been impossible to ascertain the date of organization of this society, but the files of the Hingham Journal have again been of great assistance in determining the facts given below.

The Cantata "Belshazzar's Feast" was performed April 2, 1874, with the following impersonation:

Belshazzar (King of Babylon) . . . . .	Mr. Philander Bates.
Daniel . . . . .	Mr. Louis N. Lincoln.
Hananiah . . . . .	Rev. M. A. Stevens.
High Priest . . . . .	Mr. Caleb F. Nichols.
Nitocris (The Queen) . . . . .	Miss Jennie B. Tower.
Jewish Maidens . . . . .	{ Mrs. Louis N. Lincoln. Mrs. Henry C. Tower. Miss Elizabeth C. Bates.
The Reading . . . . .	Rev. Joseph Osgood.

Two weeks later, April 16, 1874, this cantata was repeated at Duxbury, and we quote from the correspondent of the Hingham Journal.

NORTH SCITUATE, April 20.

"On Thursday evening, 16th inst., by previous announcement, the Cohasset Choral Union, conducted by Edward E. Tower, Esq., rendered the cantata of 'Belshazzar's Feast' at Duxbury. Owing to the indisposition of a member in one of the leading parts, the services of Mr. A. M. Bell of Boston were secured. By politeness of a friend your correspondent was invited to take the special train for the occasion, which was accepted, and which we improved by a trip to the old historic town. On arriving at Duxbury we found coaches in readiness to transport the one hundred and fifty sojourners to the Congregational Church, one mile distant. The church at an early hour gave signs of a good audience, and at eight o'clock precisely, the conductor's baton announced a grand overture by the orchestral performers, which was followed by a chorus of forty voices. It is useless to attempt to criticise a company of well-trained performers, therefore, we would merely re-echo the public sentiment, which manifested itself in the repeated encores, if it were not that special mention should be made of the bass soloists, Messrs. Philander Bates and Caleb F. Nichols; tenors, A. M. Bell and Louis N. Lincoln; sopranos, Mrs. Henry C. Tower, Misses Lizzie C. Bates and Jennie B. Tower; altos, Mrs. Louis N. Lincoln and Miss Frances Nichols, who fairly excelled all former efforts; and credit was also due Mr. Bell, for his admirable effort, having had the advantage of but one rehearsal in one of the most difficult parts."

On December 21, 1874, the Union gave the cantata at the Town Hall, Cohasset, entitled "The Pilgrim Fathers."

On January 26, 1877, it was announced that the society had reorganized under direction of Professor L. A. Torrens of Boston, and that it was hoped to give a concert in the early spring.

One and possibly more concerts were given under Mr. Torrens' direction, but I have been unable to find out more concerning them.

On March 17, 1879, "The Haymakers," a cantata by Root, was given by the Choral Union, and the performance was repeated two nights later. Delegations from Hingham, Weymouth, and Scituate were present. Among those who took prominent parts were Philander Bates as the Farmer, William R. Collier as William, Caleb Lothrop as John, Frank McClure as Snipkins, Miss Drusilla S. Percival as Mary, Miss Elizabeth C. Bates as Anna, and Miss Sarah Nichols (Mrs. E. Herbert Towle) as the Dairy Maid.

An Old Folks' Concert was given in 1879, and it was announced that "Ye Choral Union will be assisted by Miss Ella J. Spoor, who will sing and by Mr. Waldo F. Bates, who will blow a very worldlie tune on ye cornet." Also that "Goodman Collier, down from Boston, will sing a nautical song called Jack's Farewell," that "Nabor Edward Tower will play a tune on ye flute and his darter will accompany him on ye new fangled Spinnet called ye Pianny," and that "A Collection of young menne and maidens will play a sprightly tune called Ye Kinder Symphony, on divers instruments."

In February, 1880, the Cohasset Choral Union gave on two successive evenings the cantata "Esther, the Beautiful Queen," to a large audience. Appropriate scenery and costumes were used, and an enthusiastic review of this performance was given in the Hingham Journal. Caleb Lothrop took the part of the King and Miss Drusilla Percival that of Queen Esther. William R. Collier was Mordecai, and E. P. Collier, Haman. Newcomb B. Tower was the musical director.

In December, 1880, rehearsals were begun for another performance of the "Haymakers," and for the rendering of "Ruth," a cantata by Broad. Miss Elizabeth C. Bates took the part of Ruth.

An entertainment was given at about this time in aid of the society, at which Messrs. G. H. Wilson, B. S. Knapp, and E. E. Cutler gave the operetta of "Cox and Box," composed by Sullivan.

On February 24, 1881, another performance of the "Haymakers" took place under the direction of Newcomb B. Tower, with the following cast:

Mary .....	Miss Drusilla S. Percival.
Anna .....	Miss Elizabeth C. Bates.
The Dairymaid .....	Miss Minnie Snow.
William .....	William R. Collier.
The Farmer .....	Philander Bates.
Snipkins .....	Edmund P. Collier.
John .....	Caleb Lothrop.

This was given in costume, and elaborate stage "property," including thunder, lightning, and rain devices added much to the enjoyment of the audience.

COHASSET MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

In 1883 Edward E. Tower undertook the still larger enterprise of organizing an orchestra in which the young ladies of the town could take part. This became known as the Cohasset Musical Association, and after many rehearsals at Atlantic Hall, over the Tower Dairy, a concert was given, September 20, 1883, in the Town Hall, thirty-four performers participating, playing the various string, wind, and percussion instruments which make up an orchestra. Of these nearly one half were ladies, a unique feature in orchestras at that time. After this a more permanent organization was effected, and at a business meeting held at Atlantic Hall, September 30th, Edw. E. Tower was made chairman, and the name officially selected as above stated.

It was voted to choose a board of officers, consisting of three directors, a treasurer, a clerk, and a librarian. Elmer F. Olmsted was chosen clerk, Henry P. Furber treasurer, and Geo. W. Collier librarian. It was voted also that the board of directors consist of three members, in connection with the other officers. Edw. E. Tower, Daniel N. Tower, and Caleb Lothrop were chosen directors, who were authorized to conduct the business of the association as they should deem proper.

Many of the townspeople and summer residents cooperated with the active members most heartily, and became associate members, paying annual dues of three dollars, thereby being entitled to a free admission to all concerts or rehearsals. Both active and associate members had a limited number of complimentary tickets for their friends. All money received for membership fees was used for the purchase of music, instruments, and for instruction if so desired.

Mr. James O. Freeman of Boston was engaged for instruction on the violin, viola, and violoncello, and classes were immediately formed. Mr. Tower not only directed the full rehearsals, but held extra rehearsals for the brass instrument performers, many of whom had previously belonged to the Atlantic Musical Association.

Miss Edith J. Tower (Mrs. Chas. W. Gammons) a little later succeeded Mr. Freeman as instructor on the violin and viola.

On February 28, 1884, the orchestra was engaged to furnish one of the entertainments given by the People's Course of Entertainments, and gratuitously gave its services.

Under date of March 29, 1884, the Cohasset Cottager invited Mr. Tower to make a statement regarding the Association, and it may be interesting to read his exact words, as characteristic of the man. "We are doing very well considering the short time since our organization, about ten months, far better than I could have expected. 'What,' musicians say to me, 'eight young ladies in a small town like Cohasset playing the 'cello and all of them taking lessons of a competent teacher? We could hardly find as many in our large cities who would be willing to undertake it, much less to devote time and money to it; but one thing is sure, they will find it a most fascinating instrument, and once interested in it, they will never give it up; with violins it is now acknowledged to be the instrument of the future for ladies, and we do not wonder that you have so many applicants for it.' Our success so far has in a great measure been owing to the fact that in the choice of members our directors have selected only those who have more than an average knowledge of music. Of our twelve young ladies who have taken up the violin and viola, there is not one but is a creditable performer on the piano, while many of them have made music a study for the past ten years, and are or have been pupils of Petersilea, Sherwood, Lang, Mrs. Page, and others of equal note in Boston. Among the male members are three young gentlemen from Hingham who have been of the greatest assistance, while the old Atlantic Musical Association builded better than it knew when it furnished us so much material for our orchestra. We now number about fifty active members, nearly one half of whom are ladies. New additions now proposed will give us four double basses, one tuba, and one oboe. We shall then have every instrument usually found in a full orchestra.

"As to new members, this is our trouble; we want them and many young people are hard at work; but a musical education is not acquired in a few months; it is a work of years, and although imperfect, its adaptation to an instrument renders success more than half achieved, and with a taste and love for music it is not so difficult to fit one's self for active membership.

"I now propose to form a sort of primary class and as soon as the members of said class become sufficiently advanced, their names will be submitted to the board of directors for approval, and if accepted, will at once be assigned their work in the orchestra. I am promised the hearty cooperation of the regular members, who will assist this class, and I think it will prove of mutual advantage to both. Our class rehearsals will take place Wednesday evenings."

The quotation as above certainly shows the time, energy, and enthusiasm which Mr. Tower devoted to this work.

In order to participate in the Memorial Day Exercises of 1884, a brass band was organized, consisting of Cohasset Musical Association members. Twenty-six men played for the Grand Army Post on this occasion, both for the marching and at the collation in the Town Hall. The Cottager remarked that the Band surprised the natives by their excellent music, but needed considerable practice in marching.

The summer concert given by the orchestra in the July following proved most successful, and music still more difficult was executed. This concert was hardly over when Mr. Tower was again at work with the band, and an open air concert on the Common was the outcome. After this concert Dr. Newcomb L. Damon and Mr. Edwin F. Souther were serenaded. The band then proceeded to do the same at Mr. Louis N. Lincoln's and not until after midnight were the members dispersed.

In the next month was held the fair given by Henry Bryant Post 98 G. A. R., and on the first night the Association Band struck up a lively march as the Post, with their guests, entered the hall. The programme of the second night's entertainment of this fair consisted entirely of musical selections by the band.

The fall concert showed still further advance in proficiency, and an increased membership of fifty-two, including six double bass players. The list of members given in the Cottager of October 11, 1884, may be of interest, showing that the membership was then increased to sixty-five.

In an address to the members published in the Cottager, Mr. Tower stated in vigorous language the necessity for prompt attendance at rehearsals, and gave an itemized statement of the amounts paid out for the needs of the Association during the first year of its existence. The total amount was $2445.00, including $1300.00 for stringed instruments alone.

No assessment of any kind was ever required from active members, their only expense having been a small rental for the use of an instrument, with the privilege of later purchasing said instrument if so desired.

In the Presidential campaign of 1884 the band of the Association showed its non-partisanship by playing for both Republican and Democratic rallies.

On January 23, 1885, the Association, fifty-eight strong, gave a concert at Loring Hall, Hingham, for the benefit of the fund for a church parlor for the First Church of Hingham.

One week later the services of our musicians were again sought after by the People's Course of Entertainments, and a pleasing programme was rendered.

For two years more the Association continued to give orchestral concerts, in each of which approximately eighty performers took part, the nearby towns and Boston furnishing representatives. The assistance of professional musicians was requested, in order to strengthen the weak places, and former members will recall many of their names, such as Joseph Fennelly, at one time with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Wulf Fries, the well known 'cellist, Carl Trautman, one of the older generation of German musicians; De Ribas, the oboist, and Eltz, the bassoonist. Mrs. Nichols, now the director of the Fadette Orchestra, played with the first violins, and was a soloist at one of the concerts. Gerard Russo, the harpist, at one time assisted. Arthur Foote, pianist and composer, was one of the soloists at the third annual autumn concert, and one of his own compositions for 'cello, "The Romance," was played by Wulf Fries, to the accompaniment of the composer. Miss Gertrude Edmands was soloist at one concert.

The character of the selections was greatly in advance of those of the earlier concerts, the Association on one occasion rendering Haydn's "Symphony in D Major."

To the best of our knowledge the last orchestral concert given by the full orchestra took place September 27, 1887. Mr. Tower, however, was not satisfied with a purely orchestral organization. A chorus had to be added, and the following circular, sent out to choir members of Cohasset and neighboring towns, is self-explanatory:

COHASSET, December 1, 1887.

You are hereby invited to take part in the next rehearsal of the Cohasset Musical Association. With the assistance already offered it is hoped to form a chorus of from one to two hundred voices, and that members of any choir or past musical organization will take a prominent part. The first preparatory rehearsal will take place at Atlantic Hall, Monday evening, December 5, 1887. You are cordially invited to be present.

Per order Board of Directors,

C. NICHOLS, Clerk.

Mr. Tower had become very much interested in choral society work, having been elected, in 1885, the first director of the newly organized Hingham Choral Society.

"The Holy City," an oratorio composed by Alfred R. Gaul, was given at the Town Hall, Cohasset, June 17th, 1888. The program states that members of the Hingham Choral Society and choirs of East Weymouth, Wollaston, and Scituate assisted the local singers. The following soloists took part:

First Soprano .....	Miss Jessie E. Ollivier.
Second Soprano.....	Miss Meriam L. Slade.
First Alto.....	Miss Georgie Nixon.
Second Alto.....	Miss Pauline Hammond.
Tenor.....	Mr. Arthur F. Burnett.

	{ Samuel C. Bates.
	{ Russell B. Tower.

The oratorio "Emmanuel," composed by J. Elliot Trowbridge, was next given, June 30, 1889, and as this was the most ambitious undertaking in the history of the Association, a portion of the programme is given below, showing the scale on which it was conducted.

The vocal department of the association will be augmented by members of the Hingham, East Weymouth, and Wollaston Musical Societies, making a grand chorus of over 150 voices, with the Full Association Orchestra, numbering 75 members, and a boy choir of 25 voices.

Rehearsals were later begun of another oratorio, "The Ten Virgins," by Gaul, but the project was abandoned.

But few more years were to be allotted to Edw. E. Tower's life, and during this time nothing more was done in large orchestra or chorus work. His enthusiasm for music continued unabated, and we find him directing a band, organized for the occasion, which took part in the exercises on Columbus Day in 1892. This band was composed principally of former Atlantic Musical Association members, and members of the Beechwood Band. This latter organization had done excellent work, and had given many concerts in Beechwood and elsewhere.

A boys' band was next organized, with Mr. Tower, as usual, directing, and again followed a succession of performances at entertainments, lawn parties, and open air concerts. A small orchestra was added, and at a concert given June 20, 1894, the band and orchestra alternately played selections. Miss Bessie Bell Collier played in the orchestra and rendered a violin solo.

Forty years of musical service of Edward E. Tower were thus completed. This performance was the last in which he participated, his death occurring in April, 1896. He thoroughly enjoyed every minute of this activity, but in his band work particularly the idea of service to the community undoubtedly promoted his interest in the musical welfare of the town. Mr. Edmund P. Collier so well expressed this idea in an obituary written for the Boston Transcript, at the time of Mr. Tower's death, that the liberty is taken of giving two quotations from that notice.

"His idea was that the best way to keep a boy out of the street and away from the bar room was to teach him the use of some musical instrument, and thus put him in possession of a means of enjoyment which would refine and elevate rather than debase."

"All this work was done in time snatched from a very active business life, and was given to the citizens of the town gratuitously, with no reward asked for or expected, more than the consciousness of having added to their entertainment and musical culture."

The limited scope of this article does not permit me to narrate in detail regarding the bands and orchestras that have been organized in recent years. Much could be told of the Beechwood Band mentioned above, the Cohasset Guild Band, directed by Waldo F. Bates of North Scituate, in which Rev. Milo H. Gates took such an active interest, and of the "South Shore Band" which George P. Tower has conducted, the last named having very recently participated in the Taft-Bryan political campaign of 1908.

Since about 1890 Elmer F. Olmstead has directed an orchestra of from twelve to fifteen members, nearly all of whom belonged to the Cohasset Musical Association, and much enjoyment has been derived by these members at their rehearsals and participation in church entertainments and other social assemblies. At Union Vesper services given in the winter of 1907-08 by the First and Second Congregational Churches of Cohasset, this orchestra assisted the choirs in musical programmes made up of compositions by classical composers.

In attempting to give a record of these musical societies, doubtless many events of importance have unintentionally been omitted. What has been told, however, may bring pleasant recollections to the minds of many who took part in the performances of the seventies and eighties. Possibly those of the younger generation may be surprised at the musical activity shown at that time.

The influence of those earlier societies is still felt and many a member of the present day bands, choirs, and orchestras can trace the origin of his interest in music to the days of the Atlantic Musical Association, Cohasset Choral Union, or Cohasset Musical Association.

COHASSET'S DEEP SEA CAPTAINS.

BY EDMUND POMEROY COLLIER.

IN the year 1800, or thereabouts, young Southward Pratt left his father's house in Cohasset on a morning in summer for the prosaic purpose of driving the cows to pasture, a task he had performed since he had been able to trudge at their heels and put up and take down the bars of the fence which confined them in their pasture.

It had been his custom also to go for the cows at night and bring them home, but on that particular night the cows stood at the bars lowing in vain to be let out and taken home to the barn to be milked. But their young driver did not make his appearance that evening nor for many a day after, for young Southward Pratt had responded to the call of the sea, which called to him as he stood at the pasture bars, and had "run away to sea."

Three years afterward young Mercy Gannett, who had come from Scituate to live out at the Pratts, in those days when the hired girl was an equal of the members of the family for whom she worked, started one summer afternoon to get the cows and bring them home. But as she approached the pasture she found the bars being taken down by a young man, whose cheeks, burned by the sun and wind of foreign climes, showed that his calling was that of a sailor, who informed her that he would drive the cows home. Mercy hastened home with the report that a strange young man had taken away the cows from her.

It was young Southward Pratt, who, returning from three years voyaging over foreign seas, had resumed the task, dropped so abruptly by him, of driving the cows. This true story ended as it naturally should by Southward and Mercy in time becoming man and wife, and is only introduced here as the opening of this chapter on deep sea captains as an illustration of the irresistible call of the sea for the boys of Cohasset.

That the inhabitants of Cohasset should have been a seafaring race was as inevitable as that the city of Tyre on the coast of Phoenicia should have furnished a nation of sailors and merchants.

In Cohasset's early days there was every inducement toward shipbuilding and seafaring. The virgin forests stood ready to supply the oak and pine necessary for the construction of the vessel. Young men, eager to take up the adventurous life of the sailor, awaited the completion of the craft, each one confident that a few years of experience and hard work would find him in command of a ship of his own.

In the days of small craft, before the huge steel leviathans were even imagined, before the railways had compelled the distribution of cargoes from a few ports, when the little town of Salem rivaled Boston as a port through which trade with India was carried on, it was not unusual for a seacoast town of the size of Cohasset to send forth square-rigged, deep sea vessels, built and manned from captain to cabin boy by her own sons. The constitution of the State, recognizing this fact, permitted the study of navigation in its High Schools.

What a change has the passing of the years wrought in the life of Cohasset in this respect! Where two or three shipyards turned out annually vessels furnishing occupation for her ship carpenters, sailors and fishermen; where wharves, extending at intervals from the head of the cove to Hominy Point on one side of the harbor and to the Gulf Stream on the other, served as berths for a crowd of merchantmen, fishermen, and packets, now the echo of the mallet and adze has long since died away, and the vessels of various descriptions which formerly filled the harbor have departed never to return.

In their place we see a fleet of pleasure craft and power dories, and Cohasset, once a town furnishing employment to its inhabitants within its borders, serves now as a bedroom for men and women earning their living in Boston.

Twenty-five years ago, sea captains, men who had sailed their ships and carried the flag of their country to every part of the globe, were a common sight on our streets. To-day Cohasset cannot boast of a man living within its borders who has ever commanded a square-rigged vessel, and but few sailors who have been in foreign ports. This change, while it is, perhaps, to be regretted, is one which has been brought about by the new conditions under which business of every kind is transacted to-day.

Since the seafaring vocation of Cohasset and the men who followed it are no more, it behooves us to make a matter of record of the men and the vessels hailing from Cohasset in those good old days. But, alas, we have taken up this task too late. Of the very early masters there is barely more than the record of their names. In some cases the families to which they belonged have died out, or have departed from the town, and it is not strange that no record is left behind of their vessels and voyages, for in but a few instances can be obtained complete records of the voyages of captains whose children are living to-day. If, therefore, this chapter fails to give as full a record of each captain as might be desired, it is only because such records are not obtainable.

Not a few square-rigged vessels were built at Cohasset and hailed from it, but the schooner then, as to-day, was the popular craft. Most of the schooners were built primarily for fishing, but in the winter, instead of letting this property lie idle, it was the custom to intrust it to the care of some bright young Cohasset skipper for the purpose of trading in the Gulf of Mexico. A cargo would be obtained in Boston for some port in the Southern States, Charleston, Mobile, Savannah, New Orleans, or Galveston, and between these ports and the ports of the West Indies trading voyages were made until it was time for the schooner to return to Cohasset to fit out for the fishing season.

As a rule the captain of the vessel was given some interest in the profits of the winter's work, as was right and proper, for the success of the winter's trading depended largely on his keenness, prudence, and devotion to his employer's interests. Contact with the merchants and shipowners of Boston soon brought about an opportunity to serve as mate in some larger vessel bound for ports in Europe, and so, step by step, the lad who started at the lowest round of the ladder as boy in a fishing schooner, in time attained the topmost round, and walked the quarter-deck of a Yankee clipper ship, the acme at that time of naval construction.

Nothing shows the difference between the old and the new more than the early age at which boys began to follow the sea.

Frank Pratt went to sea at eight, James Collier at nine, and John P. T. Percival at eleven; and these instances might be multiplied indefinitely. It followed naturally that captains under twenty-one were not uncommon. The call of the sea for the young men of Cohasset seemed irresistible in those days, and the dangers attending the life of the sailor served rather to increase than to diminish its attractiveness.

Frank Pratt, son of Dr. Ezekiel Pratt and father of Dr. Gustavus Pratt, gives the following incident in an account which he left of his seafaring life. "We were in the Gulf Stream in a North east gale with a heavy cross sea running. Soon the flying jib boom and all was carried away by the sea. We were 'hove to' at the time under close reefed fore-sail. Next the halyards parted, went out the scuppers and caught in the rudder. That left us under bare poles. It was then I saw the captain do a brave and dangerous piece of seamanship, such as I have never seen done since, in sixteen years of sea life. The jib must be saved if possible. No one dared to go on the bow-sprit but the captain. I stood in the companion-way and saw him go out on the end of the bow-sprit, stand up, holding on to the jib-stay with both hands, knife in his mouth, go under three times, all out of sight, hold on and cut the sail from the hanks."

Such incidents as these served as themes for many a winter's tale around Cohasset firesides fifty to seventy-five years ago. Many of these sea captains attained to a competency from the very fact that the deep sea vessels of those days were so small, and it was possible for them to own a respectable interest in them and share profits of the voyages.

As has been said, of the earliest sea captains very little has come down to us but the record of their births and deaths. In the houses of their descendants hang their portraits, painted, usually in Antwerp, and perhaps the picture of one of the square-riggers commanded by them.

Among these captains may be mentioned Aaron Pratt, born in 1760, and died in 1843. From the register of the Boston Custom House we glean these items, that Aaron Pratt was captain of the schooner Enterprise in 1809, of the brig Eliza and Lydia in 1810, and of the Triton in 1811. As only vessels going to foreign ports were registered at the Boston Custom House, we may safely put him down, as well as the others whose names follow, as deep sea sailors.

John Jacob Lothrop was born in 1763, and died in 1823. No doubt his name would have been found as captain of some vessel registered at the Boston Custom House were it not for the fact that the books of registration covering the period from 1789 to 1806 are at Washington, for use in the French Spoliation claims, which have been dragging along now for over a century. Captain Lothrop's portrait, painted in Antwerp, hangs in the house of his grand daughter, Mrs. Richard Sankey. In 1789 he is spoken of as master of the schooner Priscilla, in 1794 of the schooner Betsey, in 1795 of the sloop Clara, in 1798 of the schooner Bethiah.

In the year 1807 there came to Cohasset, from Truro, on the Cape, two brothers; Ephraim Snow, born in 1777, and Henry Snow, born in 1781. They purchased the house now occupied by Dr. William Bryant, on Black Horse Lane, now called, in remembrance of them, Snow Place.

The elder of these brothers is known to have been a deep sea captain, and is said to have crossed the Atlantic fifty times. In 1807 the registry of the Boston Custom House has him as master of the schooner Ruth, a Cohasset vessel of 115 tons, owned and built in 1805 by Levi Tower. In 1810, still in command of the schooner Ruth, an attempt is made by the press gang in Liverpool to take from him some members of his crew, and in 1815 we find this same vessel registered with E. Snow still as captain, but with her rig changed to that of a brig. The supposition is that from 1807 up to and including 1815, and probably beyond that time, Captain Snow was master of the Ruth, and made in her foreign voyages.

Two other vessels which he commanded, and in which he made voyages to Liverpool, were the ships Mt. Vernon and Warren. On one of his voyages he brought from Spain the boy Salvador Sabate y Morell, of Willaseca, Tarragona, born 1790, and naturalized April 9, 1816, as Samuel Snow. This young Spaniard evidently took naturally to the water, for we find him in 1816, the year of his naturalization, captain of the new fishing schooner Independence. Later we find Samuel Snow registered as captain of the schooner Good Intent, the schooner Six Brothers, of the brig Mayflower, December 8, 1823, and of the schooner Joseph, November 3, 1824. He was lost at sea October 3, 1825.

CAPTAIN EPHRAIM SNOW was the father of a second Captain Ephraim Snow, and father-in-law of Captain J. P. T. Percival.

CAPTAIN HENRY SNOW, brother of Ephraim Snow, we can learn but little about, and that only from the record department of the Boston Custom House. There he is recorded as captain of the following Cohasset vessels registered for foreign voyages, schooner Speedwell, 1811; schooner Three Sisters, 1816; schooner Franklin, 1820; brig Rebecca, 1820; schooner Almira, 1821; brig Ann, 1822 and 1824. He was father of Captain Henry Snow and father-in-law of Captain Nichols Pratt.

PETER PRATT, son of Captain Aaron mentioned above, is said to have been very severe in his treatment of his men, and to obtain a crew was obliged to resort to the subterfuge of remaining below until his ship was at sea and then appearing on the quarter-deck, to the consternation of his sailors. In 1815 he was captain of the New Orleans Packet, in 1829 of the ship Hellespont, in 1833 of the ship Propontis, and in 1834 of the ship Conohasset. In 1834 and 1835 he paid hospital money at the port of Cohasset as captain of the Schooner Ellen.

CAPTAIN EZEKIEL WALLIS (or Wallace) lived in the house at the southerly end of South Main Street, near the Scituate line, now partially burnt, and known for some years as the "Highland House." He was born in 1784 and died in 1859. In the first volume of this history he is spoken of as captain of the schooner Nancy, in the year 1814, which was captured by the English and taken to Halifax. In 1814 he was captain of the brig George.

JAMES COLLIER, born at North Scituate in 1775, died there in 1850. He married Sally Lincoln of Cohasset, a daughter of Allan Lincoln, who was captured on board his vessel by the English during the Revolution and died in an English prison. Her mother was Persis Tower, who, after her husband's death, is said to have sailed a schooner to Gloucester, to obtain supplies for the inhabitants of Cohasset cut off by the English blockade. After the Revolution she married Captain James Hall, one of Washington's staff officers, and thus became the ancestress of two lines of sailors.

In the year 1803 he was owner and captain of the Light Horse. At the age of 31, in the year 1806, he was captain of the ship William Tell of Scituate, a vessel of 258 tons. Possibly on this voyage he visited Antwerp, for his picture, painted in that city at about that time, is still in the possession of his grand-children. Later he bought the wharf in Cohasset formerly owned by Luther Stephenson and others, and became a vessel owner, as well as master, for in 1814 the schooner Little Sarah is registered at the Boston Custom House with James Collier as builder, owner and master. In 1821 he is again registered as her captain, and in 1824 of the Young James. All these, as well as the Elizabeth, built in 1829, were named for his children.

Although his living came from the sea, he wished that his sons might not be obliged to follow it, and gave four of them trades, which they promptly put one side and proceeded to enroll themselves in the ranks of Cohasset's sailors.

CAPTAIN LEVI PRATT was born in 1798 and died in 1869. He is recorded in the Boston Custom House as captain of the following vessels: ship Fama, 1825; schooner Bashaw, 1829; schooner High Flyer, 1832; the ship Concordia, 1851; the ship Chaos, 771 tons, 1840; ship Amazon, 1855. Two other ships which he commanded were the Robert and the Triton, or Trenton.

CAPTAIN DANIEL T. LOTHROP was born in 1796, and died in 1871. His first command of which we have any record is the Cohasset-built schooner Three Sisters in 1820, owned in part by his father. He then entered the employ of the Grays, of Newburyport and Boston, for whom he sailed the brig Cornelia in 1823, the brig Charlotte, 274 tons, in 1826 and 1830, the ship Streglitz in 1835, and the ship Oriosto, 361 tons, in 1839.

In the later years of his life, after his retirement from the sea, he acted as Underwriter's Agent, and was until his death one of the solid, public-spirited citizens of the town.

CAPT. GEORGE HALL.
1790-1854.

Negative by Russell E. Toner.

CAPT JAMES COLLIER.
1775-1850.

CAPTAIN THOMAS STODDARD, born in Cohasset in 1787, died in 1854. In the later years of his life he was always referred to as Lieutenant Stoddard, a title gained in the revenue service. He is recorded as captain of the schooner Juno in the years 1811 and 1820.

CAPTAIN GEORGE HALL was the son of Persis (Tower) Lincoln and Captain James Hall, and was born in Cohasset in 1790, in the house on the Plain, now owned by Mrs. Nina E. Lincoln. In his younger days he made voyages to the Mediterranean. On one of these voyages his vessel was captured by pirates, who signified their intention of stripping the vessel and setting it adrift. It seemed as if the captain and crew were about to face death by starvation in midwinter. Most opportunely it was discovered that Captain Hall and the captain of the pirate crew were masons. Immediately the aspect of affairs was changed, and Captain Hall was allowed to go on his way rejoicing, bringing his vessel safely into port.

In 1815 he was awarded a gold medal by the Massachusetts Humane Society for his bravery in assisting in the rescue of two sailors shipwrecked off Cohasset rocks. In 1818 he commanded the schooner Little Sarah, and in 1821 the schooner Morgiana. In 1828 he abandoned foreign voyages, and for many years sailed a packet between Cohasset and Boston.

He afterwards engaged in the fishing business with his brother, Abraham, having a wharf and store at Hominy Point, near where now stands the Cohasset Yacht Club House. He married Cynthia Collier of Scituate (whose brother, Captain James Collier had married his half-sister, Sallie Lincoln), and built the house on Highland Avenue, still known as the old George Hall house, where he reared a family of sixteen children. Some of his sons are well remembered to-day as sailors and shipbuilders. To him descended from his father, the Revolutionary officer, his membership in the order of the Cincinnati. He died at Cohasset in 1854.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL HALL, the youngest son of Captain James Hall, is on record at the Boston Custom House as captain and part owner of the schooner Charlotte, from 1830 to 1834 engaged in foreign commerce.

CAPTAIN PHILIP FOX. The most picturesque figure on the list of Cohasset's deep sea captains is Captain Philip Fox. He was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1795, and married April 9, 1815, Anna, the daughter of Joel Willcutt, of Cohasset. How this young sailor from England came to Cohasset and married a Cohasset girl, we know not, nor whether at that time he was a sailor before the mast or a mate, but probably the latter.

His father-in-law, Joel Willcutt, kept a diary in which were recorded happenings worthy of note in his family, and in the town. From this diary we learn that Fox sailed from Boston May 11, 1818, in the ship Milo bound for Charleston, S. C. From the Custom House Register at Boston we learn that the ship Milo was owned by David Hinckley and commanded by Captain Bronson. Without doubt Philip Fox was her first mate.

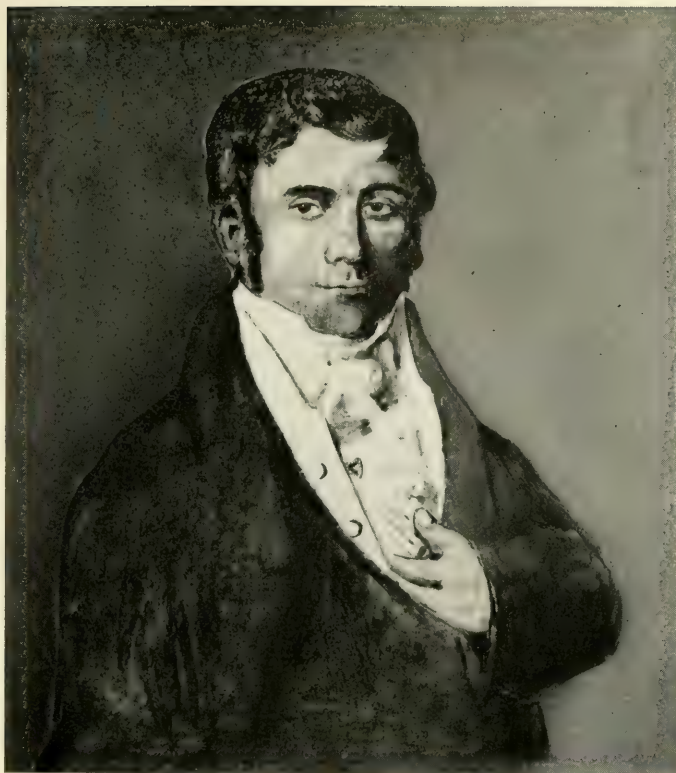

The next year Captain Bronson and Philip Fox were transferred to the ship Herald. The Herald was a new vessel of 302 tons, built in 1818 at Newbury, and owned by David Hinckley, Samuel Appleton and David P. Parker. On the outward voyage Captain Bronson was lost overboard and Philip Fox assumed command. His first voyage as captain was made in 36 days, arriving in Boston from Liverpool April 4, 1819.

On his second voyage the time was 45 days from Liverpool to Boston, where he arrived August 16. The new ship Herald in these two voyages had not shown any evidence of the speed which was in her, nor had her captain established the reputation, which was soon to be his, as a driver.

On the next voyage from Liverpool to Boston the Herald arrived December 23, bringing London papers dated the 4th and Liverpool papers dated the 6th. The Boston Gazette under the marine head announced the passage "seventeen days from Liverpool, fourteen to Cape Cod." The Sentinel, Patriot and Daily Advertiser all give her 17 days. Under the marine head of the Advertiser it is stated thus: "The Herald sailed from Liverpool December 6 and arrived in our Bay yesterday (23) morning. This is the shortest passage from any port in England within our recollection."

Lastly Joel Willcutt in his diary under date of December 23, 1819, has this entry: "Captain Fox arrived at Boston in seventeen days from Liverpool." There is no doubt therefore that her passage of seventeen days is given as correctly as could be without ascertaining the precise hour at which she left Liverpool and the hour she arrived in Boston, which if ascertained would probably make it a few hours more or less than seventeen days.

CAPT. PHILIP FOX.

SHIP "EMERALD"

Philip Fox, at the age of twenty-four, as captain of the ship Herald, had made the quickest passage ever made from England to America. It was on his arrival at this time when hailed to know when he left, that he replied, "Week before last." Captain Fox had an appreciation of a joke even though he was of English birth.

January 13, 1820, he is off again, this time for Charleston. May 16 records his arrival at Boston, probably from Liverpool, to which port no doubt the Herald sailed from Charleston, as the trip from Boston to Charleston, thence to Liverpool with cotton, and home again with passengers and miscellaneous freight, was a common trip in those days.

May 29 he sails again for Charleston, and October 4 finds him in Boston again, the round trip taking as before about four months. November 5 he left for Charleston, and his arrival home is not recorded until May 7, 1821, a six months' trip this time, possibly to different ports, possibly delayed waiting for cargo, for we cannot imagine him making a slow passage. June 10th Captain Fox left Boston for Liverpool, accompanied by his wife and little son, Charles, and September 19 Joel Willcutt records: "Captain Fox arrived at Boston and came home with his wife and Charles this evening," and October 1, "Captain Fox moved into Joshua Oakes' house."

Charles Fox, the eldest son of Captain Fox, used to relate in after years his remembrances of this trip to England at the age of six. A trip was made into Lincolnshire, where the little boy was struck with the oddity of a flight of stairs going up on the outside of his grandfather's house. He also had a vivid recollection of the stage coach in which they made their journey, being chased by highwaymen from whom by the fleetness of their horses, they escaped.

October 23d he sailed again for Charleston, and his next home-coming is noted on the 17th of April, 1822. After his usual three weeks' stay on shore he started again for Charleston, May 5, taking Mrs. Fox with him, and made the round trip in less than four months, arriving in Boston August 27th. This was Captain Fox's last voyage on the Herald.

Another line of Liverpool packets was owned by James Read and others, the ships being given the names of precious stones. To Captain Fox was given the command of the ship Emerald. The ship Emerald was built in Boston in 1822, and was a vessel of 359 tons. She seems like a pigmy to us to-day, but in her day, evidently, was a good-sized ship. The list of her eighty-four owners is a list of the blueblood merchant princes of eighty-five years ago. And Philip Fox was the captain chosen to bring out what was in her. October 11, 1822, she was registered, and on the 13th she starts on her maiden voyage. April 23, 1823, he arrived home from Liverpool, a six months' trip. Nothing wonderful about that. Evidently the Emerald was not yet tuned up. April 20th he is off again, and arrives home the week of August 22d, not doing so well as the Amethyst, which left May 5th and arrived August 22d. On this voyage in the Amethyst sailed Joseph Willcutt, Captain Fox's brother-in-law, probably as a mate, and on the next voyage of the Emerald, Captain Fox signed him as mate.

The Emerald has now been in commission a year; she has Cohasset men as captain and mate. Let's see what she can do. Joel Willcutt tells in one line: "1824, March 10th, Captain Fox arrived from Liverpool in sixteen days."

This record of Joel Willcutt's as to the length of the two quick passages bears testimony to the fact that Captain Fox considered this trip of the Emerald quicker by one day than the one made in the Herald in 1819.

The Emerald arrived on the 8th of March, 1824. The daily Advertiser, Patriot and Palladium of the 9th and Gazette of the 11th give her sixteen days. The Centinel of the 10th gives her fifteen days, fourteen hours. The Palladium of the 12th contains the following, "We have examined the log book of the Emerald and find she sailed from Liverpool Friday, February 20th, at 3 P.M. came round the rock, at 4 discharged the pilot. At 4 A.M., 21st, passed Holyhead. March 8th, 3 P.M., hove to off Boston Light. At 4 took a pilot and at 6 anchored below Fort Independence."

Taking the hour of rounding the rock on the 20th as the time of leaving port and the hour of dropping the anchor on the 8th as the time of arrival, and taking into account that 1824 was leap year, the log would seem to make the passage of the Emerald seventeen days and three hours, or no shorter than the passage of the Herald. For years afterward these two short passages were the theme for argument and the matter was threshed over and over.

In 1851 Samuel Topliff, an authority on marine matters, prompted by a discussion at that time going on in the Boston papers, made an exhaustive examination of all the records at hand, with the above result, that there was probably no actual difference in the length of the two passages. Whether this is the last word or not, we do not know, but as we have said above, Captain Fox evidently put down the trip of the Herald as seventeen days and of the Emerald as sixteen.

At all events, and in either case, it was he who made the quick passage. In both cases the passages were spoken of as fourteen days to Cape Cod, and this article had been once written, put in type, and the proof struck off, based on a magazine article, which was largely based on fancy evidently, wherein Captain Fox is depicted as throwing on the wharf at Boston a package of English newspapers not fourteen days old. A story current in Cohasset, and which must have some basis of truth in it, for Cohasset and Scituate men served under Captain Fox, was that coming into Boston Harbor at the termination of one of these quick passages, Captain Fox did not wait for the tide to serve for the vessel to get up to the wharf, but ran her on to the mud and taking a row boat hurried ashore and reported his arrival.

From the following anecdote it may be inferred that the quick passage of the Emerald was made in a continuous gale from shore to shore, and that Captain Fox carried sail all the time, indeed, the man at the wheel had to be lashed to prevent his being swept overboard. As the Emerald was coming up Massachusetts Bay, Captain Fox appearing on deck in the morning caught sight of the lee rail. "Why here's a stranger," he cried.

It has been said that so great an interest had been aroused by the performances of the clipper ships under the command of Captain Fox that hundreds assembled on India Wharf to witness the leaving of the Emerald on what was to be the quickest passage.

Some there were, probably, who made all kinds of dismal prophecies as to the ultimate end of the ship driven by so reckless a captain. Others, no doubt, called to mind the fact that although Captain Fox was a driver he had never yet lost a spar or sail. As the ship disappeared down the harbor under her own sail, for there were no steam tugs in those days to tow vessels out of port, or into their wharves, the crowd turned away, calculating the time when the Emerald would poke her nose into the wharf she had just left. But the most sanguine never imagined how short that time would be.

In those days no wireless messages conveyed the news from Cape Cod of a home-bound ship's return; no telegram from Hull told of her nearing her destination. It was only when she came up the harbor, under more sail than most captains care to carry when coming into port, that the owners were informed that the Emerald was returning. It never occurred to them that she was returning from Liverpool, but that she was returning to repair the damage occasioned by some mishap. Therefore, as soon as the Emerald was within hailing distance, Captain Fox was greeted with the inquiry, "What's the matter?" For answer he tossed on the wharf a package of English papers not eighteen days old, and bade them look at the dates.

It has been said that the insurance companies after this record trip of the Emerald refused to insure any vessels captained by Philip Fox. Be that as it may, Joel Willcutt records his starting off again March 21st, and his arrival home June 3rd, whether in the Emerald or not he does not say, but Captain Fox evidently kept at his vocation as sea captain until his death, which occurred in the Mediterranean in 1832.

There is no one alive who remembers Captain Fox, but stories concerning him are plentiful in Cohasset, and from these one gathers that he was a man of quick impulses, generous to a fault, ever ready to do a friend a good turn. This latter trait is evidenced by the fact that he obtained ships, or places on ships, for his brother-in-law and the husbands of his sisters-in-law.

When he arrived in Boston he was always in Cohasset the same day, and if he was not able to hire a horse and chaise for the journey, he would buy one. He bought the house on North Main Street, now occupied by his granddaughters, while it was in process of construction, and had it finished to suit his peculiar ideas. Either before or after he was in the Liverpool trade he probably made journeys to India, for he brought home articles of furniture which must have come from that locality.

The Amethyst and the Emerald were sold into the whaling trade and the Amethyst was lost among the ice upon the northwest coast in 1886. The Emerald was purchased by John A. Parker an eminent merchant of New Bedford, in 1827, and she became famous in the new business she was so long employed in, whaling. Lucky as a whaler as she had been as a packet, in seven voyages her average fare was 2700 barrels of whale and sperm oil.

In 1862 she was sold to parties in Honolulu, S. I., and her new debut was under the native name of one of the ancient kings there. Whether she is going now or not, we do not know, but certainly she must have been a strongly built vessel to have survived Philip Fox's driving her with all sail set in the midst of a gale and running on the mud in the place of the more prosaic method of letting go the anchor.

The picture of her which is reproduced here is from the collection of oil paintings of old ships in the possession of Mr. William O. Taylor, of the Boston Globe, who very kindly had the painting photographed in order that a half-tone might be obtained for this chapter. The vessel is represented as being in holiday attire on the occasion of some celebration, possibly the laying of the foundation of the Bunker Hill Monument June 17, 1775, when Lafayette laid the corner stone and Daniel Webster made the oration. The National ensign floating at the stern with its nineteen stripes is interesting as showing the number of states in the Union at that time, although by the law passed in 1818 the flag was restored to the original thirteen stripes.

This passage of the Emerald is we believe the quickest ever made between Liverpool and Boston by a vessel of her size or anywhere near her size.

The clipper ship Red Jacket, 3500 tons, built in Bath in 1854, made the trip from Boston to Liverpool in a shorter time.

CAPTAIN JOSEPH WILLCUTT was born in Cohasset, September 22, 1799. He was a son of Joel Willcutt, whose diary has already been referred to, and to which the writer acknowledges his deep obligation for valuable bits of information in preparing this chapter.

So far as is known Joel Willcutt never was a sailor, but his sons all were, and his daughters, with two exceptions, married sailors. Possibly this was due to the fact that his wife, whose name was Sutton, came from a seafaring family. His sons, Lewis, Warren, Andrew, Lot, and Joseph, all became fishermen in their youth, and Andrew and Lewis made deep sea voyages, but there is no record that any one of them, with the exception of Joseph, ever became deep sea captains, although Andrew is spoken of as captain of the fishing schooner Union.

His daughter, Anna, married Captain Philip Fox, Betsey became the wife of Captain James Pratt, Isabella married Captain John Williams, who with Captain Charles Bennett, the husband of Myra Willcutt, was lost at sea in a trip to the West Indies in 1841.

From 1814, when Joseph was fifteen years old, to 1819, we find annual records in the diary of his fitting out each summer for mackerel voyages, but in the latter year he began to sail with his brother-in-law, Captain Fox, in the ship Herald on his voyages to Charleston and Liverpool. On May 9, 1822, Joseph arrived at Boston four days after Captain Fox had sailed from Boston, so it is probable that sometime in 1821 Captain Fox had obtained a berth for him in some other vessel, presumably as mate.

July 12th he returned from another voyage. October 13th he sailed for Savannah on the ship America. May 3, 1823, he sailed for Charleston in the ship Amethyst, arriving home by way of Liverpool, August 22d. He then took the position of mate on the Emerald under his brother-in-law, Captain Fox, and his first voyage from Liverpool to Boston was made in sixteen days. The next record we have of Joseph is of his leaving Boston, June 24, 1824, for Liverpool, and arriving in Boston, September 24th.

January 1, 1829, he sailed from Boston in the ship Charles Henry; November 30, 1831, he arrived at Boston.

The last two entries in the diary in regard to him are: "1835, January 29th, Joseph came home this day." "1841, April 8th, Our son Joseph died."

In the latter years of his life he owned a quarter interest in the bark Juno, of which he was also commander. We have no record of the exact date when he first became a captain, but it was probably in 1824, or soon after. He married Myra Bates and lived in the house on the northerly corner of Highland Avenue and Beach Street, which she inherited from her father.

The records at the Boston Custom House give us this further record in regard to Captain Joseph Willcutt. In 1836 he was captain of the 541-ton ship Charlotte, built in 1836, and owned by Henry Oxnard, Abbot Lawrence, and William Appleton. In March, 1839, he is registered as captain and part owner of the 295-ton bark Juno, built in Boston in the winter of 1838-39, and this was without doubt his last command.

CAPTAIN JOHN WILLIAMS and CAPTAIN CHARLES BENNETT married Isabella and Myra, daughters of Joel Willcutt. In a voyage from New York to the West Indies with a heavy cargo of corn their vessel was lost, and no tidings were ever obtained from them. Captain Williams was accompanied by his son, Lyman Davis, fourteen years of age, who pleaded so hard to be taken along that his father reluctantly consented, against his own better judgment, hoping that one voyage would cure the boy of his desire to become a sailor. So in one year Joel Willcutt was robbed by death of one son, two sons-in-law, and a grandson.

The record given of such vessels commanded by John Williams as were registered at the Boston Custom House is as follows: (It must be understood that a vessel is registered but once, unless it has changed owners.) Brig Laurel, July 21, 1823; brig Susan, June 15, 1824, brig Mermaid, August 6, 1830, brig Fortune, March 1, 1831; brig Elizabeth, November 11, 1836 (owned in Hingham); brig Padang, January 7, 1832. October 17, 1837, he is registered as captain of the schooner Amanda Ophelia, named for his infant daughter, a vessel of 58 tons, built at Robinson, Maine, the same year, the others owners being Rufus Lane, Charles Lane, and Caleb Marsh.

He is registered August 11, 1838, as master of the brig Russell, built at Cohasset in 1835, also May 11, 1839; schooner Harmony, November 9, 1839, built at Cohasset the preceding year.

Of the schooner Eunice, built at Cohasset in 1835, and owned by Abraham H. Tower, he was captain, September 5, 1840, and September 21, 1841, captain and part owner. This vessel was his last command, and the voyage on which he started in her in September, 1841, was only ended when his vessel laid her bones on the bottom of the sea, over which he had sailed for so many years.

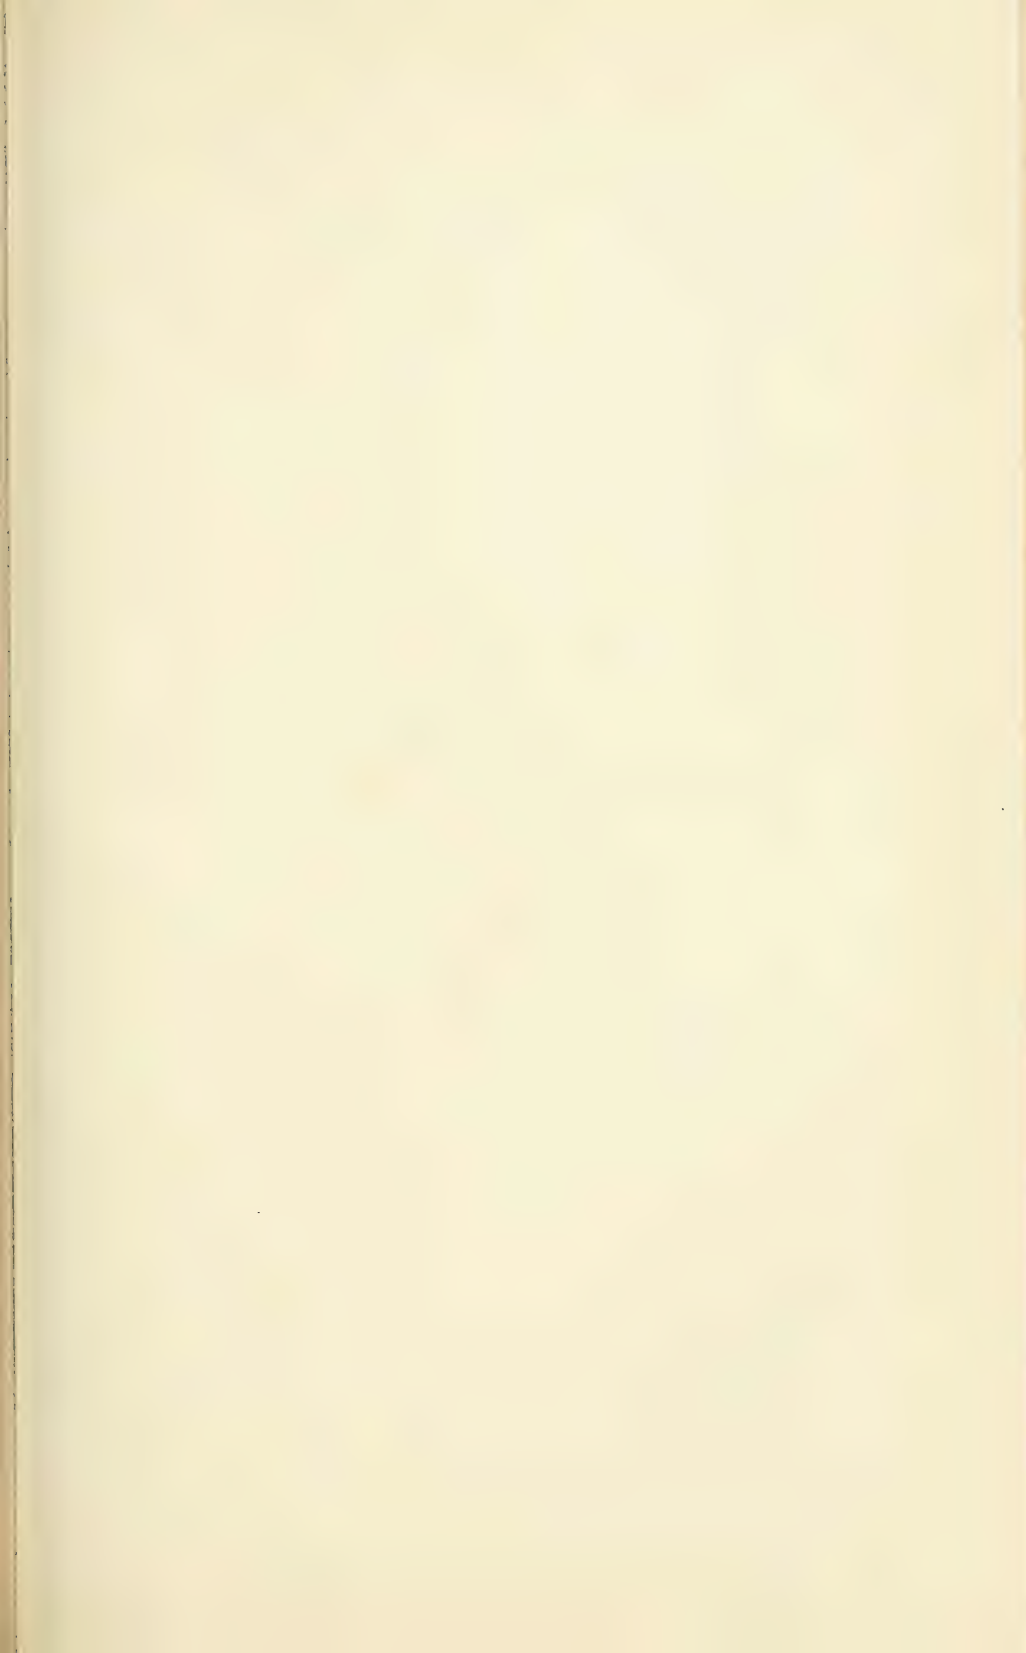

Of CAPTAIN JAMES PRATT, the remaining son-in-law of Joel Willcutt, we have been unable to find any record, except that he was at one time captain of the brig Talisman, and it was while he commanded this vessel that her picture was painted representing her as entering the harbor of Liverpool, a reproduction of which forms one of the illustrations of this chapter.

CAPTAIN JOHN LINCOLN was born in 1784, and died at sea in 1832. The name of John Lincoln is given as captain of the following vessels in the registers of the Boston Custom House, but as the name continues on the records after the death of the Cohasset John Lincoln, we cannot be sure that these vessels were actually commanded by him: Schooner Eliza, May, 1819; schooner Mary Ann, 1822; brig Boston, 1823; brig Billow, 1824; brig Chilo, 1828; brig Wave, 1831. We also find another John Lincoln, commanding the following Cohasset vessels: — Schooner William, 1791, brig Triton, 1793, schooner Neptune, 1795.

CAPTAIN JOHN WILSON was born in 1788, and died in 1861. In the possession of his grandson are a sextant inscribed, "John Wilson, 1809," one or two old log books, now almost indecipherable on account of age and water stains, an old cutlass left by an English officer on board the Cohasset packet during the War of 1812, a certificate of American citizenship from the collector of the port of New York, and a water-color picture of the Cohasset schooner Charlotte (hermaphrodite brig) in the harbor of Marseilles in 1830.

From the first volume of the Cohasset history we learn that he was captured in the Cohasset packet in the War of 1812, and that his vessel was redeemed by her owner, Levi Tower, by the payment of a ransom. Hence the cutlass. In 1819 he is mentioned as captain of the fishing schooner Lydia. The records of the Boston Custom House show him to have been captain of the Almira in 1823. From the log book we learn that the voyages made at this time were from Norfolk, Va., to Malaga and back to Boston, and from Philadelphia to St. Thomas.

November 17, 1827, he is recorded as captain of the schooner Charlotte, and we know from the picture referred to above that he was still captain of the same craft in 1830. In 1836, 1837, and 1838, he was captain of the schooner Eolus, and in 1841, he is registered not only as captain of the schooner Caroline, but as part owner. In 1845 he commanded the schooner Bounty.

JOHN (BAPTISTE) BARKER was born in Italy in 1791. What brought him to Cohasset we do not know, but we do know that he settled here, married a Cohasset girl, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States, under the name of John Barker. Possibly his name had been Giovanni Baptiste in his native Italy. He was most commonly known as Teesta Barker. Not a great deal can be ascertained in regard to his voyages. Frank Pratt, in his journal, mentions him in 1830 as sailing master of the fishing schooner Tower, owned by Captain Nichols Tower. On this voyage he was accompanied by his son, Elijah. In this vessel, in 1833 and 1837, he made foreign voyages.

For several years he made trips to the West Indies in the schooner Juno, owned by Captain Nichols Tower, and in his last voyage in her was run down and nearly lost his life. The bark Lewis, also owned by Captain Nichols Tower, was another vessel which he commanded in 1841. He made several voyages in vessels owned by Captain Lothrop. St. Thomas, Porto Rico, and Curacoa were some of the ports visited by him on his voyages. In 1845 he was captain of the schooner Herculean, built at Salisbury, and owned jointly by D. T. Lothrop, Josiah O. Lawrence, and Captain David B. Wilson, and in 1846 he is registered as master and managing owner of the same vessel. In 1850 a John Barker is mentioned as captain of the brig Moulton.

His last voyages were as captain of the schooner Grey Eagle, owned by himself and the Whitons of Hingham, of which he took command in October, 1852. On January 6, 1856, when within twenty-four hours' sail from New York, his vessel was capsized, and all on board were lost.

Captain Barker was one of the many men in Cohasset who distinguished himself as a life saver. *When the Boston was wrecked on the rocks off Cohasset, Captain Barker, assisted by John Lothrop and two others, went out in a boat to the wreck and took off the crew. For this act Captain Barker received a gold medal, which is now in the possession of his great-grandson in Newark, N. J.

LEAVITT BARNES was born in 1799, and was drowned off the the Island of St. Thomas, August 25, 1827. He was captain of the Three Sisters in 1821, of the Hero in 1824, and of the Juno, in which, or from which, he lost his life, in 1827.

CAPTAIN WARREN ORCUTT was born in 1800, and died in 1872. He was captain of the schooner Sarah in 1832, the schooner Gold Finch in 1833, the schooner Caroline in March and December, 1836, the schooner Typhoon in 1859.

CAPTAIN DAVID SUTTON was a familiar figure on the streets of Cohasset. He occupied the house on the corner of South Main and Beechwood Streets, the site of which is now occupied by the house built by William B. Johnson, Esq. His father was John Sutton, who came from Scituate to Cohasset and commanded, and was part owner in 1790 of the schooner Becky.

David S. Sutton was born in 1802. He is mentioned as captain of the new ship Ohio, in 1848, and as owner of one-third, and in 1849 as captain and three-eighths owner of the same vessel. He is also remembered as master of the bark Amazon out of Boston to New Orleans. In 1857 he is recorded as captain of the bark J. A. Lee.

CAPTAIN EZRA TOWLE, born at Suncook, N. H., March 30, 1804. Married Sybil Barnes of Cohasset, December 21, 1828. He came to Cohasset when fourteen years of age, where for three years he sailed in various fishing vessels during the summer months, studying navigation and mathematics with various Cohasset captains and completing his education in these branches in Boston. At eighteen, he entered the Liverpool Packet service; at nineteen was first mate and at twenty-one, was a captain in that service. A number of Cohasset men sailed with him before the mast, and as mates, at various times during the fourteen years he was engaged in this service, but no record of his voyages is now to be had, and we are dependent almost entirely on tradition for any information.

It is known that at the time of his marriage, in 1828, he had completed one of the quickest runs on record and had received a cash reward for the best run of the season. He was a man of genial disposition and warm heart, open handed and liberal in the extreme, but like many of the old time captains, rather severe aboard ship and a stickler for his rights, obliging not only his crew to toe the mark, but everybody he did business with.

At request of his wife, he left the Liverpool service about 1833 or 1834 and entered the coasting trade, sailing mainly to Southern Ports—Savannah, New Orleans, Norfolk, the West Indies, etc. An incident, related to the writer by one who witnessed it, will signify a little Captain Towles' character. Captain Towles was sent by the owners to New Orleans to bring back a barque, whose captain and mate had died of yellow jack, and whose crew had all deserted her. He took on two men, a first mate and rigger, relying on picking up a crew there to handle her. He secured a crew of nine men, all tough specimens, and they made their boasts that they would fix the d——d Yankee Skipper before 48 hours.

The second day out, the whole nine men got in a mixed up general row in the forecastle. The mate, who jumped below, was thrown on deck with a broken collar bone and a bad scalp wound. The narrator says Captain Ez. made about two jumps from the mizzenmast to the forecastle, grabbing a capstan bar on his way. He sprang below, and for about 15 minutes there was the liveliest mixup ever seen, but he was the last man on deck, driving them all before him, and every man bore some mark of that handspike. But after that, we had no more trouble with that crew. They realized their captain was a man and respected him as such.

In 1839, 1840 and 1841 he paid hospital money at the port of Cohasset as captain of the schooner Rebecca and in 1844 of the schooner Rubicon.

Captain Towle left the sea for good in the early fifties, embarking in business as a contractor, in Cohasset. The older members of the community will remember the line of stages be conducted, connecting with the Hingham and Nantasket boats. By an unfortunate accident in 1856, he lost his left hand and crippled his right, but although handicapped, he still continued, until his death, actively engaged in various business lines.

One monument to his enterprise is the cut at Cunningham's bridge. This outlet through the beach at this point having been made by Captain Towle, connecting the waters of Little Harbor with the ocean. He died in 1872.

CAPTAIN DAVID WILSON was another foreigner who became an adopted son of Cohasset and one of her deep sea captains. He seems to have accumulated property in his calling, for in the vessels which he commanded he generally was part owner. His record at the Boston Custom House is, 1843, master and owner with Josiah O. Lawrence of the brig Casket; 1845, master and quarter owner of the brig Speedwell; 1848, master and third owner of the brig Speedwell; 1849, master and quarter owner of the bark Julia; 1850, master and three-eighths owner bark Julia; 1852-53, master of the schooner Georgianna; 1853-54, master and three-eighths owner of the ship Kepler; 1855, master and three-eighths owner of the ship Daylight. He was also one-third owner of the schooner Herculean.

SEPTIMUS THORNDIKE was another of Cohasset's captains of whom we can obtain but a very short record. In 1834 he was captain of the Two Sisters, in 1838 and 1839 of the Eunice, in 1840 of the Bela Bates, in 1841 of the Susan. Whether these were fishing vessels or not we have no means of knowing. In May, 1843, he took command of the new brig Speedwell, owned by A. H. Tower and Caleb Lothrop, and in June of the same year died on board of her.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM PRATT, son of Captain Peter and grandson of Captain Aaron Pratt was a well-known deep sea captain, but almost no record can be obtained of his voyages. In 1838 he paid hospital money as captain of the schooner Ellen, in 1841 as captain of the schooner Gull, in 1846 of the schooner Talisman, of which he was part owner. In 1836 he was registered at the Boston Custom House as captain of the brig Phoebe Ann. His voyages carried him as far away as Calcutta, and he is known to have been wrecked on the west coast of South America when in the guano trade. Late in life he was skipper of the Cohasset-built yacht Gracie. He was born in 1807 and died in 1894.

CAPTAIN GEORGE W. COLLIER, the oldest son of Captain James Collier, was born in Cohasset in 1809. His father evidently did not intend him for a sailor, for he received a better education than did most of the boys of his age, and when a young man, took charge of the books in his father's store on the wharf at the head of the cove.

He was at one time a member of the school committee, and represented Cohasset for one term as a member of the General Court. He and his chum, Edward Doane, were also elected at one of the town meetings as field drivers, and soon gave evidence of the fact that they did not consider the office an honorary one by putting their fathers' cows in the pound.

In the first volume of this history he is set down as captain of the Polly in 1816, but, as at that time he was but seven years old, the entry is manifestly an error. A close investigation of the register discloses the fact that George Collins was the captain of the Polly at that time, a very natural error and one frequently made with the name of Collier. In spite of the intention of his father to make a merchant of him, it was evident that the love for the sea would not permit him to remain on shore.

In 1831 he took part in a rescue of sailors shipwrecked on our coast, as is shown by the following inscription on a medal in the possession of his nephew, George Collier Bates, "The Humane Society of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to George W. Collier in testimony of their appreciation of his exertions, united with seven others, whereby the lives of the crew of the schooner Boston were preserved when in imminent danger off Cohasset rocks, April 12th, 1831."

Perhaps the very work he was engaged in, making entries pertaining to the vessels owned, or partly owned by his father, the Young James, Little Sarah, Elizabeth, General Marion, Rubicon, Pantheon, Profit, and Hobart, only served to make him restless. Possibly the call of the sea was too strong to be resisted as he looked out on the waters of the harbor dotted with vessels, or thought of his brother sailing his vessel on southern seas. At any rate he finally put one side the pen with which he had adorned with beautiful penmanship the ledgers in the old store on the wharf, and became a sailor.

We have no record showing how, or in what vessels, or on what voyages, he obtained his preliminary training, but our first knowledge of him as sailor is obtained from Frank Pratt's narrative, where he appears as second mate of the bark Hobart, a Cohasset vessel with a Cohasset name, and manned from Captain down by Cohasset men. This was in 1842, in his thirty-third year, and the voyage was New York to Bordeaux, thence to New Orleans, and back to New York.

In the next voyage of the Hobart he was promoted to the position of first mate. This voyage was to Buenos Ayres and return, but the return was four years later than was anticipated, and Mr. Collier brought back as captain the vessel in which he had gone out as first mate. On arriving at New York the bark was immediately loaded with provisions for the sufferers from the famine in Ireland, and Captain Collier still continued in command.

Captain Abraham Hall, who has already been referred to in these pages, visited Baltimore in his packet, carrying there freights of mackerel caught by the Cohasset fisherman, and returning with the products of the South. The firm with which he transacted business in Baltimore was that of John Henderson & Co. On one of his trips Captain Hall found that young Gustavus Henderson, a son of the head of the firm, had run away from home and stowed himself away in the packet, and only appeared on deck when it was too late to return to his home. The upshot of the matter was that young Henderson became a member of the Hall family and stayed in Cohasset for six or seven years, becoming intimate with the Collier boys, who were nephews of Captain Hall.

Nothing was more natural than that George W. Collier, in search of a ship, should turn to the friend of his young manhood, Gustavus Henderson, now a member of the firm of Henderson & Co., and apply for the command of one of the ships owned by that firm. The Hendersons always kept a warm spot in their hearts for any one hailing from Cohasset, and Captain J. P. T. Percival in his narrative bears testimony to the loving care which they bestowed on his dying brother, whom he was obliged to leave at Baltimore on one of his voyages.

So it came about that for many years Captain George W. Collier sailed from Baltimore in the employ of the Hendersons as captain of the ships Chasca and Jane Henderson. February 21, 1859, the ship John H. Jarvis, 740 tons, is registered at Boston with George W. Collier as captain and one-eighth owner. John Henry Cook was a sailor with him on this voyage, which was to New Orleans, Trieste, Venice, and other European ports, and Mr. Cook relates that when the vessel was outside of port Captain Collier had the crew called on deck and addressed them in a few words to this effect:—"Men, we have started on a voyage which I hope will be a good voyage for us and a good voyage for the owners of this ship. My constant endeavor shall be to work for the best interests of the owners, and if you will do the same, I shall be perfectly satisfied." "And," added Mr. Cook, "if he had asked any man in that crew to jump overboard for him, he would have done it in a minute."

Captain Collier was a man of exceedingly nervous temperament, absent-minded to the degree that on one occasion, in New Orleans, having availed himself of the loan of a horse and buggy to ride down town, his business completed, he returned home by car, leaving the horse and buggy where he had hitched him.

Captain Collier married in England Miss Annie Tongue, whose ability may be judged from the fact that during an illness of Captain Collier, as related by Mr. Cook, she took charge and navigated the vessel. He was extremely fond of a practical joke, and, it is said, was the life of that group of homesick Cohasset boys cooped up in the town of Montevideo for four years.

At the close of the Civil War he located in New Orleans in the ship chandlery business, where he lived until his death in 1886.

DR. EZEKIEL PRATT, always referred to in Cohasset as "Old Dr. Pratt," furnished three sons and one grandson to the list of Cohasset's master mariners. The only complete record we have of any of them is that written of himself by Francis L. Pratt, the youngest son, which appears later in these pages.

His eldest son, Nichols, was born in 1809, and died in 1848 at the age of thirty-nine, too early to have advanced far in his profession. In 1850 he was in command of the schooner Caroline.

Captain Percival speaks of him in 1836 as the captain of the schooner Bela Bates. We know that later he was in command of vessels making foreign voyages, but we can get no record of them. He paid hospital money as captain in 1834 of the schooner Morgiana, in 1835 of the schooner Friendship.

His son, also named Nichols Pratt, was born in Cohasset in 1840, and died in California in 1907. At the age of twenty-two he enlisted in the navy in the Civil War as acting master's mate. November 2, 1863, he was promoted to the position of acting ensign, and April 25, 1865, was made acting master. He was on blockade service for twenty-three months, and was in the convoy and recovery of the ship Ohio. He received a letter from the department for services at Fort Fisher. After the war he went to China and obtained a position as captain of a river steamer there, and made China his home until 1907, when he returned to the United States, dying in California the same year.

Another son of Dr. Pratt was Henry, born in 1812. He is spoken of by his brother Frank as mate of the Bela Bates at the age of fifteen, and ten years later he is spoken of as captain of the brig Talisman. He is also spoken of as second mate of a brig belonging to Mr. Jairus Pratt. This brig, according to Joel Willcutt's diary, was launched at Cohasset in 1834. His record at the Boston Custom House is captain brig Talisman and part owner, 1837; 1844, captain brig Ann and Julia. March 30, 1849, he is registered as master and part owner of the brig Pianet, 120 tons, the other owners being John H. Baker, Clark Cutting, and Artemas Thorndike, of Cohasset, and George Stoddard and George Adams, of Hingham.

The Pianet was built at Eastport, Maine, in 1848. This voyage was to California at the time of the gold fever, and in addition to the owners, there were in the crew from Cohasset, Charles Bourne, Richard Lothrop, Israel Vinal, Lorenzo Bates, and Isaac Pratt. Captain Pratt remained in California until the later years of his life, when he returned East.

FRANCIS L. PRATT was born in Cohasset, September 14, 1818, the youngest son of Dr. Ezekiel Pratt, and a descendant of the old Captain Aaron Pratt. At the age of eight he began his career as a sailor on the schooner Albicare, Captain Willcutt, master, Edward Doane, supercargo, and Joseph Briggs, mate, for a trip to Bangor for lumber, receiving for the trip four dollars. The next summer he made fishing trips on the schooner Convert, Captain, Ezekiel Wallace. The next year on the schooner Susan, Captain, Freeman Gannett, he served as cook on a voyage to Washington, North Carolina, at a salary of eight dollars per month. It was on this voyage that the brave deed referred to in the beginning of this chapter was performed.

His next maritime experience was on the fishing schooner William, sometimes called Black Bill, Captain, John Pratt. At the age of ten he made his first voyage as sailor on the schooner Bela Bates, Captain Crosby, with his brother Henry as mate. The voyage was from Cohasset to Richmond for a cargo of flour to be carried to Portland, Maine.

The next summer the fishing schooner Myra, Captain, Caleb Souther, and Friendship, Captain, Elijah Pratt, had him as a member of their crews; and the next year the Bela Bates, Captain, Henry Martin. This schooner, Bela Bates, seems to have been the training school for a great many Cohasset boys.

At the age of eleven, in company with his cousin Warren, Frank Pratt made his first trip on a square rigger, the ship Chatham, Captain Wood, on that voyage taken so often in those days, Boston to Charleston, thence to Liverpool, and back to Boston. At this point in his narrative he breaks forth into this exclamation, — "Now notice, ye big boys of seventeen loafing about town, I was eleven years old when I shipped on this vessel among all strangers as a green hand."

That summer he went fishing, and the next fall joined the Chatham again for a voyage to Savannah and Liverpool. The rest of the winter he spent at school, and after another summer at fishing, he made a third trip to Liverpool on the Chatham, this time by way of New Orleans. On this trip he was accompanied by a Cohasset boy friend, Joshua Bates, and on the trip from Liverpool to Boston the crew were stricken with smallpox.

That winter he studied navigation, and at the age of seventeen shipped on the brig Castile, Captain Smith, as second mate on a voyage to Jacksonville, St. Domingo, and back. Captain Warren

Bates next obtained for him the position of second mate on the brig Cygnets, commanded by his brother-in-law, John Sayward, on a voyage to Wilmington, North Carolina, thence to South America, with lumber, and home with a cargo of molasses.

At the age of eighteen he signed as first mate on the fine new brig Ceylon of Duxbury, Captain, Charles Soule, for a voyage from Boston to St. Thomas and return. At nineteen he was first mate of the brig Russian, sailing from New York to Havana. In the cargo was a donkey engine, the first one ever set up in Cuba.

Mr. Pratt was a teetotaler, and relates how he substituted hot coffee for grog as a stimulant to the sailors when working the vessel in a gale. After discharging her cargo at Havana the Russian proceeded to Matanzas, where she took on a load of sugar for Antwerp, upon discharging which a cargo of salt was taken on at Cadiz for Boston.

Arriving at Boston he shipped as second mate at Cohasset for a fishing trip on the topsail schooner Tower, of which Nichols Tower was Captain, and John Barker, sailing master. Among the crew were Frederick Tower, Elijah Barker, and young Sam Snow. It was not a successful trip, and the crew arrived home just before Thanksgiving, each man in debt to the vessel $27.

He then resolved to try his fortunes in the new republic of Texas, and took passage on a new ship, commanded by Captain Winsor, of Duxbury, for New Orleans. The trip from New Orleans to Texas was made in the schooner Hannah. Texas did not prove to be any better place for making a fortune than old Massachusetts, and Mr. Pratt returned home, being fortunate enough to secure the position of second mate on the brig Grand Turk, loaded with tobacco for Boston.

On his return to Cohasset he bought in Gloucester for $1,000, in partnership with Mr. Alfred Whittington, the schooner Essex, in which he made successful fishing trips during the summer. The next winter, in the brig Talisman, commanded by his brother Henry, he made a trip as first mate from Boston to St. Joseph, Florida, thence to Mobile, for a cargo of cotton. In the summer he went fishing in the Essex. The following winter he took command of the schooner Bela Bates, on which he had first sailed as a boy of ten, for a freighting trip between ports in the Southern States.

The next two summers he spent fishing in the schooner Essex, sandwiching a winter of putting down buoys for the lighthouse board on the schooner Eagle, under the command of Captain Nichols Tower. In the fall of 1841 he worked on the bark Lewis, building at Cohasset, but gave up this employment to join the bark Hobart, Captain, James Collier, as first mate, on a trip to Charleston, thence to Bordeaux with rice, from there to New Orleans with prunes and wine, where a cargo of corn was taken on for New York. On the trip from Charleston to Bordeaux the Hobart started in company with two brigs from Newport, Rhode Island, and beat them into Bordeaux by a full week. The Hobart was evidently a good sailer, for on one trip from Mobile to New York, Captain Collier walked into the consignee's office just as the postman handed in his letter. Our young readers must remember that in 1840 it took about a week to carry a letter from Mobile to New York.

While the Hobart was lying at New Orleans the boiler of a steamer on the opposite bank exploded, setting fire to the steamer, which burned to the water's edge. This, occurring in the night, furnished a grand but awful spectacle to the crew of the Hobart, roused from their slumbers by the din of the explosion. No time, however, was wasted in watching, for boats were immediately launched from the bark and the crew did manful service in rescuing from the river the members of the steamer's crew. On the completion of this voyage Captain Pratt spent the summer as captain of the fishing schooner Ansurla, belonging to Esquire Doane, and of a schooner belonging to Lewis Willcutt.

In the fall he shipped as first mate on the brig Eolus, belonging to Esquire Doane, and spent the winter trading between Charleston and Cuba. After another summer spent in mackerel fishing he decided to give up the sea, and spent the rest of his life on shore. Captain Pratt figured that he had sailed about 78,000 miles during his career as a sailor.

Two brothers who were noted sea captains in their day, and upheld the reputation of Cohasset skippers in foreign ports were ADNA N. and JOHN WARREN BATES. They were born on Fort Hill, in Boston, although of the old Cohasset family of Bates, Adna in 1812, Warren in 1815.

Adna, after completing his education in the Boston schools, was employed for some time in the stationers store of Mr. Allen on Cornhill. At what time he began his sea life is not known, but probably very early. He was connected by marriage with the Saywards of Gloucester, and probably sailed from that port in the days when it was something more than the home of the fishing industry. For that reason his name is not to be found in the registers of the Boston Custom House until 1848, when he is set down as captain of the Julia and Helen, a ship of 637 tons owned by Samuel Sayward, of Gloucester.

In this vessel he made a voyage to San Francisco, reaching there when the gold fever was at its height. On his arrival he sold the vessel and cargo and remained in San Francisco and Sacramento until 1856. On his return home he took up again the occupation of a sea captain, sailing from Gloucester in the Surinam trade. In the early sixties he made voyages to Rochelle, Hamburg, and other ports in Europe, but in 1864 retired from the sea. He was a skillful navigator and noted for his proficiency in mathematics. For a number of years he served the town as Selectman, Assessor, and Overseer of the Poor. He died in Cohasset, February 24, 1881.

JOHN WARREN BATES, as did his brother, entered the seafaring vocation as a boy. He, too, sailed from Gloucester, commanding two brigs from there, probably owned by the Saywards. He was engaged in the West Indian trade for many years. We find him registered from Boston as captain in 1849 of the Ganges, a 244-ton brig owned by William F. Mason. In 1849 he took command of the new brig Czarina, owned by the firm of F. Nickerson & Co., and in 1856 we find him in command of the ship Flying Eagle, owned by the same firm.

The Flying Eagle was a ship of 1094 tons burden, and said to be the fastest sailing vessel afloat at that time. In her he made voyages to San Francisco and around the world. Another vessel commanded by him was the Prometheus.

October 10, 1861, he is registered as captain and one-eighth owner, with the Nickersons, of the 199-ton bark Carib, and October 17, 1862, as captain of the 1297-ton ship Orion. In this last vessel he probably was employed by the United States Government in the transportation of troops. Probably his last command was the 1546-ton clipper ship Criterion, engaged in the California trade, under the management of Glidden & Williams.

On retiring from the sea he acted as the West Indies agent of a prominent Boston business house for many years. Captain Bates was for a number of years a member of the Cohasset School Committee. He was also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Public Library, and its first Librarian. Captain Bates was a great lover of poetry, particularly of Byron, whose poems he could recite from memory. He died in Cohasset in 1895.

CAPTAIN THOMAS DOYLE was born in Ireland, and came to Cohasset through the instrumentality of the elder Captain Ephraim Snow. He rose to be a master mariner, and was commander of the schooners Antelope and Abigail, the brigs Eliza Burgess and Almatia, and the bark Maryland.

CAPTAIN JAMES COLLIER (until 1850 known as Captain James Collier, Jr.) probably commanded more ships and sailed more long voyages than any seafaring man who ever went out from Cohasset. And possibly his record in this respect has been seldom equaled by any captain, for in the latter years of his life, when in London, a captain there made the wager that his own record for number of vessels commanded and voyages made could not be equaled by the captain of any merchantman then in that port, the largest in the world. The wager was quickly taken by a captain who named Captain Collier as one who could overtop the record so confidently offered for competition. The result showed Captain Collier an easy winner.

In the size of the ships he commanded he also led his friends among the Cohasset sea captains, for beginning with the Storm King the vessels of which he was master were all 1300 tons or over, while the only other ships which we have recorded in this chapter, coming anywhere near that tonnage, are the Orion, 1298 tons, and the Criterion, 1546 tons, commanded by Captain John W. Bates.

Captain James Collier was born in Cohasset, in August, 1813, on Cove Street, now known as Elm Street, in a little house built by his great-grandfather, Thomas Lincoln, which stood where the Osgood School driveway enters the lot. At the age of nine years he presented to his parents the ultimatum so common in those days, "Let me go fishing, or I'll run away," which was settled in the usual way by the boy taking service as a fisherman on one of his father's vessels, possible the Young James, named for him.

Alex Litchfield was a boy of about the same age on the same schooner, and John Cook, an older boy, who was a member of the crew, indulged his propensity for joking, which is well remembered by those who knew Captain Cook, by fomenting strife between these two boys, getting them ashore on the first island touched at, where a duel with fists was fought out, with Captain Cook as referee.

At the age of 18, at the suggestion of Captain Abraham H. Tower, he was made captain of the schooner Profit, leaving Boston for Norfolk City and Richmond with a general cargo. The return cargo was coal, consigned to Oliver Ames, North Easton, Mass., which was landed at Weymouth and carted across country to North Easton. What a striking commentary on the difference in the methods of transportation now and seventy-five years ago!

In 1834 in the Profit he made a voyage to Savannah, returning to Cohasset by way of Providence, and in the same year we find him commanding the schooner Rubicon at New Orleans. In the following year in the same vessel he made trading voyages from New Orleans to Kingston, Jamaica, Santiago de Cuba, Galveston, and Yucatan.

In 1838 we find him at St. Marks. In 1840 he is made captain of the bark Hobart, a Cohasset vessel, and that year and the next made trips in her to Mobile, Providence, New York, Tripoli, and Leghorn. The round trip from New York to Charleston, Bordeaux, New Orleans, and back to New York was made in 1842.

In October of that year Captain Collier became engaged to Miss Joanna Nichols Bates, of Cohasset, and soon after left for Buenos Ayres by way of Rio Janeiro in the Hobart, expecting to be married on his return home from the voyage. But on the 21st of May, 1843, the Hobart was stranded on the bar of the River Pantanoso, in the bay of Montevideo. A lawsuit arose on account of the general average, which dragged on after the Spanish fashion, and Captain Collier was detained in Montevideo until 1845, when he left the bark and came home, arriving in Cohasset in May, and was married July 6th. When the Hobart returned to New York, two years later, she was under the command of Captain George W. Collier, who had gone out in her as first mate, with Jacob F. Bates, Captain Collier's brother-in-law, as mate.

The Hobart was a vessel to which the writer of this chapter was wont to refer as an example of the old-time shipping days in Cohasset, — a Cohasset vessel, with a Cohasset name, built, owned, captained, officered and manned by Cohasset men. But when he searched for her record at the Boston Custom House he found it was not there. No enrollment, no register. Nobody living in Cohasset had any recollection of a vessel built seventy years ago. Finally recourse was had to the New York Custom House, and there it was found that the Hobart was registered in September, 1840, with the following record: "Owners, Abraham H. Tower, James Collier, Peter Lothrop, Daniel T. Lothrop and Caleb Lothrop; Captain, James Collier, Jr.; length, 96 feet, tonnage 204 tons." Reference was made to enrollment number 10 of June 12, 1840, issued at the port of Boston, but this enrollment is not on file there, and the certificate of the master builder was burned with numerous other records in the fire in the appraisers' stores, but, without doubt, her builder was Jonathan B. Bates.

In 1846 Captain Collier commanded the bark Julia on a voyage from Boston to Maracaibo.

The brig Montserrat was his next command, and in her he made one of the quickest trips on record to Queenstown, Ireland, fifteen days. The purpose of this voyage was the carrying of provisions to the famine-stricken sufferers of Ireland. On his arrival home in June he took on a cargo for Malaga, at which port he arrived in August.

In 1848 he left New York for Porto Rico, accompanied by his wife and infant daughter, with his brother-in-law, Jacob F. Bates, as first mate. San Francisco was then the goal for vessels, and January, 1849, found the Montserrat leaving New York for that port, carrying passengers, as well as cargo, to the new land of gold. The voyage home terminated at New York in March, 1850.

A year later we find him ending the same voyage at the port of New York, but in a new vessel, the bark E. H. Chapin.

In 1851 he again makes a voyage to San Francisco, but in another vessel, and by a more circuitous route. His vessel is now the bark Salem, and his route from Cincinnati, which he leaves in May, down the Ohio and Mississippi to New Orleans, where he arrived in June, thence to Rio Janeiro, leaving there in September, and arriving at San Francisco in December. His voyage home began March 16th, and ended at New York, in July, 1852.

Captain Collier was in his fortieth year when in March, 1853, he sailed from Boston as commander of the new clipper ship Storm King, for his fourth consecutive voyage around the Horn for San Francisco. The Storm King was making her maiden voyage, was 184 feet in length, and 1288 tons measurement. She was all that a ship could be made at that time, and her cargo represented a fortune. Captain Collier was informed by his owners, Messrs. Isaac Rich & Co., in their letter of instructions to him, of the great confidence they had in him in intrusting to so young a captain so valuable a ship and cargo. That their confidence was not misplaced was proved by the safe arrival of the Storm King home in April, 1854, after a successful voyage to San Francisco, touching at Callao on the return voyage.

If the Storm King carried with her the hopes and fears of her owners in Boston, no less was the feeling of anxiety for her safe return in the little seaport of Cohasset, whose inhabitants from the rocky shore and from boats, which had put out beyond the Minots, watched her till she was a speck on the horizon. For Captain Collier was not the only Cohasset man on board. His third officer was his brother, Christopher, and with him were three Cohasset boys making their first voyage, John Hall, Ezekiel Marshall, and his nephew, Samuel P. Bates, all three destined to become sea captains themselves.

In 1855 the ship Mattapan came under Captain Collier's command, and in her a voyage was made to New Orleans and probably to other ports, for in 1856 we hear of him at Charleston.

SHIP "NORTH AMERICA."
James Collier, Commander.

The 1388-ton ship North America, a beautiful specimen of naval architecture, both as regards construction and fittings, became Captain Collier's home from 1857 to 1865. October 6th of the former year he is reported at London, January 6, 1858, at Melbourne, Australia, April at Callao, and September back again in London, which port he left for Bombay and Calcutta, carrying British troops, among them Captain Havelock, who was to win fame and the title of General by his brilliant services to the Crown in India.

The year 1860 finds the North America at home, after a three years' voyage in foreign seas. In the cargo which she brought to Savannah was the first shipment to America of gunny sacks.

The War of the Rebellion was now near at hand, and Captain Collier, as soon as the Star of the East was fired on in her attempt to succor Fort Sumter, offered his services to the government in any capacity in which his experience could be made useful. He was refused on the ground of age, he being at that time in his forty-eighth year.

May, 1861, the North America left New York for St. Johns, N. F., thence to Liverpool, from which port she sailed for home in November. On this voyage Captain Collier took with him four young men from Cohasset as sailors before the mast: George H. Smith, Daniel N. Tower, Walter Tower, and Nichols Tower. Before the completion of the voyage George Smith was promoted to the position of third mate.

In February, 1862, the North America took on at Boston the Fourteenth Maine Regiment and proceeded to Ship Island, at the mouth of the Mississippi River. There she took on the Thirtieth Massachusetts Regiment, Reed's Mounted Riflemen, and the Fourth Massachusetts Battery, and started up the river, anchoring just below forts Jackson and Philip. After the forts were taken by the naval vessels, the North America followed General Butler's flagship to New Orleans, and was the second vessel to land troops.

The North America returned to Boston with a cargo of old bells and other metal which had been sent to New Orleans from the outlying plantations, subject to Beauregard's order, to be melted into cannon for the use of the Confederacy.

From 1862 to 1865 Captain Collier made trips in the North America, the ports touched at being New York, London, Antwerp, Melbourne, Callao, and the Chinchas. In 1864 he had his eye operated on at Antwerp for cataract, a disease common to seafaring men.

In 1865 the privateer Shenandoah continued preying on the commerce of the United States, even after the Confederacy had surrendered, and peace had been declared. The North America was one of the vessels marked for capture and destruction by the captain of this rebel cruiser, but Captain Collier's vigilance was equal to that of his pursuer, and the old "North" successfully passed the Shenandoah in the night in the Australasian seas.

Either before or after this event the Shenandoah was lying in Melbourne harbor, where also were lying a number of United States merchantmen. It was decided by the captains of these vessels to lay a torpedo in the path of the outgoing Shenandoah, and the torpedo was actually made and stored on board of the North America. But in some way the captain of the Shenandoah got wind of the scheme and left the harbor before the plan could be put in execution.

This was the last voyage of the North America under the flag of the United States. She was sold in South America, and Captain Collier returned home by steamer, remaining on land from August, 1865, to September, 1866.

In that month he took command of the new 1310-ton ship Tecumseh, of which his nephew, Samuel P. Bates, of Cohasset, was first mate. He left Boston, September 7th, for Valparaiso, carrying a cargo of cannon and cannon balls for the Chilian government, to be used in its war against Peru. The Tecumseh arrived at Valparaiso, December 10th, and left for Liverpool, February 10th, arriving there May 29th, and at Boston in July.

Captain Collier stayed another year on shore, and in September, 1868, took command of the new 1328-ton ship Pharos, which was to be his sea home for the next six years, and in which he made the following voyages: Left Boston, September 20, 1868, arrived at San Francisco, January 25, 1869; left there, February 24th, arrived at Liverpool, June 29th; left there July 28th, and arrived at Boston, September 6th. Left Boston, October, 1869, arrived at San Francisco, March 27th, 1870; left there April 20th, arrived at Liverpool, September 5th; left there for Boston, October 25th, at which place he arrived, December 13th.

Captain Collier's next voyage in the Pharos kept him away from home three years. He left Boston for New Orleans in January, 1871, arriving there February 17th. Left New Orleans, March 22d, for Liverpool, and arrived there in May. June 17th he left Liverpool for San Francisco, where he arrived December 9th. Left San Francisco, January, 1872, for Calcutta, where he arrived April 9th, having touched at Singapore, March 20th. Sailed from Calcutta in June, touched at St. Helena, September 14th, for water, and arrived at London, November 4th. January 28, 1873, left London for Melbourne, arriving there May 18th. He left Sidney, August 9th, for San Francisco, arriving there October 21st. Here he left the ship and came home by rail, while the Pharos kept on her way to Liverpool, where she ended her voyage.

Captain Collier left Boston by steamer in March, 1874, to rejoin his ship, but a favorable opportunity offering, he sold the ship and returned to Boston by way of Philadelphia.

From May to December, 1874, Captain Collier was at home, part of the time being employed in overseeing the construction of the new 1314-ton ship Highland Light, which was building at Bath, Me. This vessel he commanded for four years and a half. His first voyage in her was over the old route so often sailed by him, New York to San Francisco, making the trip in 127 days, arriving there April 30, 1875. In October he sailed for Liverpool, arriving there March 27th, and took on cargo for Philadelphia, where he arrived May 15th. June 30th the prow of the Highland Light was turned for the second time toward San Francisco, arriving there December 2d.

After unloading she proceeded up the river for a cargo of grain. Coming down the river she struck on Blossom Rock, but kept on her way to San Francisco, where divers made an examination of her bottom, and reported that no damage had resulted from the accident. The ship made very slow headway on the voyage to Liverpool, where she arrived July 6th, making the voyage in 150 days. As soon as the cargo was discharged the ship was put into dry dock, and a piece of Blossom Rock was discovered sticking to the keel.

The Highland Light left Liverpool, September 10th, for Callao, arriving there December 15th. Left May 1, 1878, for Mauritius, where she arrived July 16th. On the 15th day of October she left Mauritius, and arrived at Calcutta, November 2d. February 16, 1879, Captain Collier turned the Highland Light homeward, and arrived in Boston, June 29th, completing a voyage of exactly three years.

Since leaving the Storm King, Captain Collier had been in the employ of Thomas Nickerson & Co., of Boston, and his term of service with this firm ended only with his retirement from the sea in 1886, a period of thirty years, almost as remarkable a record as that of the number of his voyages. Naturally between employer and employed had grown up a feeling of mutual respect, confidence, and good will. Captain Collier had been for some time the captain oldest in service in the employ of the firm, and it was natural that his employers should turn to him now and ask him to undertake a new task. This was to leave the Highland Light, of which he was part owner, and take command of another ship.

When the old Pharos was sold, Nickerson & Co. started on the construction of a new Pharos, the largest and finest ship they had owned. She was 2200 tons burden, up to date in every respect, but had been unlucky since her launching, and the task given Captain Collier was to remove the "hoodoo" and make her as successful as she deserved to be from the money and skill put into her construction. This task was successfully accomplished.

November 29, 1879, the new ship Pharos left New York for London and arrived there December 29th. January 23d left London for Cardiff for a cargo for Coquimbo, Chile. Left Cardiff February 25th, and arrived at Coquimbo June 14th, which port he left August 18th for San Francisco, arriving there October 9th. At this port he was joined by his eldest daughter, who made the rest of the voyage with him. The voyage was to Liverpool, Calcutta, and New York, and proved to be one of the stormiest voyages in the career of Captain Collier.

The Pharos left San Francisco November 6th for Liverpool, where it arrived March 22, 1881, and left June 16th for Calcutta, arriving there October 10th. Left Calcutta January 10, 1882, and arrived at New York May 2d. July 25th the Pharos left New York for the port from which she had just returned, arriving there December 22d. After lying in Calcutta 102 days the Pharos turned toward home again, arriving in New York September 14, 1883. November 25th of the same year the prow of the Pharos was once more turned toward India, Bombay this time being her destination. At this port she arrived in April, 1884, and left for Cochin June 8th, where she took on a cargo for New York, arriving November 17th.

February 5, 1885, Captain Collier started on what was to be his last voyage. He left New York in the Pharos, bound to Bombay, where he arrived June 17th. After discharging cargo left for Calcutta August 25th, and arrived September 21st. While loading for New York he contracted the fever, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. He left for New York, November 10th, and arrived there April 2, 1886. He was then in the seventy-third year of his age, and for five years remained at home, gradually succumbing to the inroads of old age, until, January 14, 1891, at the age of seventy-eight, he furled his sails and dropped anchor in that harbor whence no ship has ever sailed back.

Although Captain Collier made several quick passages, he was never a driver, his idea being to bring his ship into port in as good condition as when she left. His long experience had taught him the folly of carrying sail when nothing was to be gained by it and possibly everything might be lost. He had become skilled in detecting the approach and escaping from monsoons and typhoons, and in one of his last voyages to New York from Calcutta, from which port he sailed in company with two other ships, he escaped, by calculating its course, a monsoon which destroyed his companion ships.

Besides the ports touched at in the United States in his early coasting trips, a partial record of ports he visited is as follows: Coquimbo, Maracaibo, Queenstown, Malaga, Antwerp, Chincha, Valparaiso, Porto Rico, Singapore, Cardiff, Kingston, Santiago, Yucatan, Bordeaux, Buenos Ayres, Monte Video, Mauritius, once each; Rio Janeiro, twice; Melbourne and Bombay, three times; Callao, four times; London and Calcutta, six times; New Orleans, seven; Liverpool, eight, and San Francisco, ten times.

CAPTAIN JAMES HALL, a son of Captain George Hall, was born in 1817 at the old Collier house on North Scituate Beach. The first sound probably that came to his ears was the sound of waves, and it certainly was the last. Presumably he served the usual apprenticeship of Cohasset boys on board fishing crafts, and in 1839 was captain of the schooner Industry, which his father had commanded before him, but the first record we have of him is on the voyage to Bordeaux on the bark Hobart, under the captaincy of his cousin, James Collier. Mr. Hall stayed with the Hobart until after his return from Ireland, and probably soon afterward became captain of his own vessel. He was captain in 1850 of the Stranger and in 1853 of the Albion. The greater part of his life he sailed between New York and the Cape of Good Hope in the wool trade.

He was at one time master of the bark James A. Lee, and is registered at the Boston Custom House in 1859 as captain of the 594-ton bark William G. Anderson.

In a terrific storm off Cape Horn in the year 1870, he was killed by a wave which came aboard his ship Orion, and was buried at sea.

He succeeded his father as member of the Order of the Cincinnati.

ISAAC HALL, a brother of Captain James Hall, was not by profession a sea captain, but a shipbuilder, but he seems to have been equipped with the knowledge and skill necessary for that position, for, as will be seen later on, he commanded a brig from Turks Island to Boston. He also commanded the 80-ton schooner Francis M. Steele in a voyage from Boston to California, which State he made his home for the rest of his life.

WINSLOW G. HALL, another brother, is also on the record, master of the 108-ton schooner John D. Sanborn, of San Francisco, November 16, 1864.

CAPTAIN CHRISTOPHER COLLIER, youngest son of Captain James Collier, was born in Cohasset in 1819, and learned in Boston the trade of a mason. He returned home in 1847 to be with his father in his last days, and stayed on the farm in North Scituate until after his father's death in 1850, when he took command of a schooner lightering stone to Minots Lighthouse, then in process of construction. He also made voyages to the West Indies with Captain Hough Larry as mate. In 1852 he was captain of the schooner Profit. He sailed in the Storm King, as has been related, as mate in 1854, on a voyage to San Francisco and return, and in 1856 was mate of the bark Quincy, Captain, Joseph H. Smith.

On his return from this voyage he became master of the bark Avon, in which he started on his last trip in 1862 on a voyage to Valparaiso and return. The voyage to Valparaiso was made in safety, but on the return trip, loaded with ore, the old vessel succumbed to the force of a terrible storm, and all on board went down with her.

The Avon had just been spoken by a captain who had formerly commanded her, and who, a few days after, with a new, strong vessel, succeeded with difficulty in weathering the gale. It was his prediction on arriving in port that the Avon was too old, and loaded with too dangerous a cargo to outlive the terrible storm which he knew she had encountered.

Captain Collier was a man of very large size, and was noted for his strength. He often remarked that at 10.30 on Sunday mornings when at sea he could fancy that he was being prayed for by his old pastor, Mr. Osgood, in the words he habitually used, "Be with those who go down to the sea in ships and do business on the great waters." He was named for his uncle, Christopher Lincoln, who was lost at sea in 1804.

So was added another to the long list of Cohasset mariners who had "gone down to the sea in ships" but had never returned. When sometime in Cohasset a marine park shall be constructed overlooking the harbor, formerly a scene of bustling activity, there will perchance be erected a monument to the memory of those who have lost their lives at sea: John Williams, Charles Bennett, John Barker, James Hall, and many others, and not the least among these shall stand the name of Christopher Collier.

The meagreness of any records of Cohasset's captains has been spoken of in these pages, but the author of this chapter hastens to acknowledge his indebtedness to an account of his own life, written after his retirement from the sea, for the perusal of his grandchildren, by Captain John P. T. Percival.

This very interesting account gives a familiar insight into the life of a Yankee sailor fifty to eighty years ago.

JOHN PHILIP TURNER PERCIVAL was born at Hanover, Mass., October 19, 1818. When eleven years of age he made his first voyage as boy on the fishing schooner La Grange from Scituate, Captain, Simeon Bates. He was allowed to take this trip by his parents in the hope that he would be cured of his love for the sea by the hardships of the voyage, but after the usual winter's schooling of the Yankee boys of those days, we find him on the schooner Henry Clay of Hingham, and during the season he held up his end as a boy of twelve by catching 105 barrels of mackerel, and the next season the same vessel had him as a member of her crew.

In 1832 he sailed under Captain John Nye, of Hingham, in the schooner Mary. In 1833 he makes his first voyage from Cohasset in the schooner Myra, Henry Snow, Jr., Captain, and A. H. Tower, owner. In the winter of 1834 in the schooner Billow, Captain Samuel Webb, he sailed from Scituate to Quincy, where a cargo of stone was taken on board for New York.

The young sailor notes with curiosity the railway built to convey the stones from the quarry to the wharf, the first of its kind in America. After unloading the stone in New York, a cargo was taken on for Richmond, Va. In the summer he again became a member of the Myra's crew.

In the winter of 1835 he took another Southern coasting trip in the Billow, and in the summer sailed again from Cohasset in the fishing schooner Bela Bates, A. H. Tower, owner, Captain, Nichols Pratt.

In 1837, at the age of nineteen, he became Captain and one-eighth owner of the fishing schooner Achsah, of which George Lawrence of Cohasset owned the other seven-eighths. Having gone as far as he could in the fishing industry, he went to Boston and obtained the berth of mate in the bark Sarah and Esther, Captain, Royal S. Higgins, for Gibraltar and Malaga. On his return he signed with Captain Henry Vinal, of Scituate, in the topsail schooner Ontario as mate. The first trip in this vessel was to Galveston with a cargo of houses ready to be put together, and these were the first houses erected on the island. During the winter trading voyages were made between Galveston and New Orleans.

In 1840 Mr. Percival shipped on board the new ship Palmyra before the mast under Captain John Cushing, of Hanover. The voyage was to Charleston, Mobile, Liverpool, and home, but at Charleston he was promoted to the position of third mate, and on arriving at Boston was made second mate, and in that capacity made a voyage to New Orleans and back. He was then made first mate of the bark Gulnare, still under Captain Cushing, and made three annual voyages with him to Havana, St. Petersburg, Bordeaux, and New Orleans.

In 1844 he sailed on the bark Juno as first mate under Captain John W. Dicks for Havana, St. Petersburg, Wiborg, Bordeaux, New Orleans, Trieste, and Smyrna. On his arrival in Boston in August, 1845, he gave up his position and was married to Miss Drusilla Snow, daughter of Captain Ephraim Snow, of Cohasset.

In September, 1845, he sailed as mate of the ship Niobe to New Orleans and return. In the fall of 1846 he took command of the schooner Joshua Bates, of Cohasset, owned by Captain Ephraim Snow and others, for a trading voyage in the Gulf of Mexico, touching at Galveston, New Orleans, Havana, Mobile, and Apalachicola, a very successful trip both for owners and captain. On this voyage he made one of the quickest trips on record, up to that time, between Havana and New Orleans.

At the end of the fishing season in 1847 he started out with the new schooner Matilda, John Bates, owner, for a trading voyage on the Gulf of Mexico, but on account of the dullness of the trade, passed the winter in freighting between New Orleans and Savannah.

In 1850 Captain Percival obtained the position of first mate in the new ship Moses Wheeler, built by the celebrated ship-builder Donald McKay, and commanded by James B. King. In this vessel he made three voyages to New Orleans, thence to Liverpool, and back to Boston in Enoch Train's line. On the last of these voyages he received at Liverpool a letter from Mr. John Bates, offering him the command of the bark Vesta, a vessel which had been wrecked on the Cohasset rocks, bought by Mr. Bates, and repaired. He accepted this offer, but found when he arrived in Boston a position awaiting him as captain of the new bark Falcon, at $125 per month, which position he was obliged to decline.

In the Vesta Captain Percival made successive voyages to Porto Rico and back to Boston; to Marseilles and Messina, thence to New York; from New York to New Orleans, thence to Philadelphia; from Philadelphia to New Orleans and back to Boston, where he arrived July 8, 1853. On July 25th of the same year he left for Gibraltar, accompanied by his wife and his infant son, arriving home in January, 1854.

In December of this year, the Vesta was chartered for a trading voyage along the west coast of Africa. On this voyage, when off the coast of Africa, Captain Percival was stricken with fever, and for a long time lay in a hut on shore, his life almost despaired of by the rude natives, who were his only attendants, and whose only method of cure was the beating of tom-toms. At length, in spite of this soothing attention, he recovered sufficiently to be placed on a mattress in an open boat and rowed down the coast until he fell in with the Vesta, which had been trading up and down the coast, and resumed command. This voyage was terminated by the arrival of the Vesta in Boston, in the latter part of June.

On the next voyage to Smyrna and Constantinople, the bark was attacked in the Mediterranean by a crew of pirates who were enabled by a calm to steal upon the Vesta in their felucca and cast their grappling irons over the rail. The officers of the Vesta, Gustavus Percival, brother of the Captain, and John L. Pratt of Cohasset, were, however, on their guard and with the crew were ready to meet them and beat them off. The grappling iron, which was cut from its rope, hung for a long time in the office of the owners of the vessel, Messrs. Trull Bros., who had bought the Vesta and made Captain Percival their agent as well as captain. The next voyage of the Vesta was made under the command of Gustavus Percival, Captain Percival remaining on shore to build the house on South Main Street, now occupied by Mr. George Nickerson.

BARK "VESTA" ENTERING MARSEILLES HARBOR.
J. P. T. Percival, Commander.

In January, 1856, Captain Percival took command of the Vesta once more, and made two more voyages to the Mediterranean, on the latter of which he was accompanied by his wife and two eldest daughters. On this voyage the Vesta encountered so severe a storm outside Gibraltar that she was obliged to lie at Malta six weeks for repairs.

These voyages were made during the Crimean War, and when at the close of the war the owners had no further use for the vessel, the Vesta was sold in Malta, together with two others of Trull Bros.' fleet, and Captain Percival and his family returned home as passengers in the ship Pathfinder, arriving in July, 1858.

In August of the same year, having bought a quarter interest in the bark Forest Belle, Captain Percival made a voyage to the Cape of Good Hope, and in January, 1859, took a cargo of ice to Savannah, where he loaded for Beyrout, Syria, with a cargo of lumber, the Syrian Government having forbidden the cutting of the cedars of Lebanon from the sides of the mountain. Captain Percival was accompanied on this voyage by his wife and three daughters. Syrian wool made the cargo for the voyage home.

In 1860, in the same vessel, he made a voyage to Havana, Cienfuegos, and back to Boston. His next voyage was to Liverpool, which was made in nineteen days, but he missed there the fine sailing packet ships which visited this port in the forties and early fifties, now crowded out by the steamships. At Liverpool a cargo of coal was taken on for Genoa, at which port, after encountering the most severe storm in the English Channel he had ever experienced, Captain Percival arrived safely, whence he sailed for Messina for a cargo of fruit, with which he arrived in Boston.

In May, 1861, the Forest Belle took a cargo of sugar from Boston to Antwerp, thence to Shields for a cargo of coal for Barcelona. On arrival at this port it was learned that the Confederate Privateer Sumter had been cruising off Gibraltar, capturing and burning American merchantmen, making it impossible to obtain a charter for any voyage which would necessitate passing through the Straits of Gibraltar. The vessel was, therefore, chartered to take a cargo of wheat from Alexandria to Marseilles, but before leaving Barcelona the Sumter was reported cruising off Marseilles and Toulon. The voyage, however, was made in safety, and the vessel arrived at Alexandria without being sighted by the Sumter. At this port news of the Mason and Slidell affair was received, and Captain Percival, for the first time, had the uncomfortable experience which was the lot of Yankee captains in European ports during the Civil War.

At that time the English captains in port at once declared war and intimated to Captain Percival that he might, before reaching home, be taken a captive and held under the paw of the British Lion. At Marseilles the prospect was discouraging enough. The Sumter was cruising off outside the port; a large part of the English navy was lying in Gibraltar Bay, making a menacing appearance, and no freight offered for an American vessel. The only thing to do was to wait. The sails were unbent, put in order, and stowed away, and everything was snugged up. Part of the crew were discharged, and the rest, with the officers, sat down to wait.

The freeing of Mason and Slidell and the arrest of the Sumter by the Spanish Government put a new face on the matter, and Captain Percival found it an easy matter to obtain a cargo of fruit at Palermo for Boston. While lying in the Straits of Gibraltar, waiting for a change of wind, he had the satisfaction of sailing around the Sumter, lying in Algeciras Bay, a captive of the Spanish Government. The trip to Boston was made without falling in with any Confederate vessels.

In seeking for a new charter for the Forest Belle it was found that the old routes by which former voyages were made must be abandoned on account of the activity of the Confederate privateers. Therefore the next and last voyage of Captain Percival was to a part of the world never before visited by him — the coast of China. On June 28, 1862, he set sail for the port of Shanghai, where he arrived February 1, 1863. After unloading, the ship was chartered for trading along the Chinese coast, and in this trade Captain Percival remained until 1866, when he returned home, leaving the Forest Belle in charge of Captain Bryant, of Plympton. The vessel was afterwards sold in China, and Captain Percival, giving up the calling which he had followed for thirty-seven years, opened a drug store in Boston, in partnership with his brother-in-law, Dr. French, under the firm name of Percival & French. Mr. French's interest was soon after bought out by Captain Percival, and the sign of J. P. T. Percival on the corner of State and Washington Streets, later nearly opposite, and finally on School Street as the City Hall Drug Store, was a familiar one for nearly thirty years to many Boston people, and particularly so to his old mercantile and seafaring friends, especially those from Cohasset and other points on the South Shore.

It could never be said of Captain Percival that the life of a sailor made a stern or rough man of him, for he was uniformly pleasant and gentle. He was devotedly attached to his family, and found greatest pleasure in his voyages when accompanied by his wife and children. His nature was such that he took keen enjoyment in the strange places he visited abroad, thus making of his voyages trips in search of pleasure and knowledge as well as of business. With the first money which he was able to save he bought and presented to his parents their homestead. He was helpful also to his brothers in their seafaring life. The old saying could be applied to him with truth, — a dutiful son, a good brother, and a kind husband and father.

Captain Percival died in Boston, October 31, 1895.

CAPTAIN JOSEPH H. SMITH was born in Portsmouth, England, in 1817, and when a young man was a sailor on the Queen's yacht. The exact inducement which led him to settle in Cohasset we do not know. In 1841 he paid hospital money at the port of Cohasset as the captain of the schooner Triton. In 1845 he interested Mr. Laban Souther to build with him the brig Almatia, of 98 tons burden. While she was building, he and Mr. George Lawrence made a trip to Virginia for a load of corn, and subsequently made another trip for a load of oysters for the Boston market. The facilities for caring for a perishable commodity in those days were few and imperfect compared with those of to-day, nor was the capacity of Boston for this toothsome bivalve anywhere near what it is now. Consequently when Captain Smith and Mr. Lawrence arrived in Boston and found that another schooner had just brought in a load of oysters, they saw that their venture was a total loss. They consequently sailed for Cohasset, and at a point between Whitehead and the entrance to the Cove threw the cargo overboard, where the shells could be seen for years afterward lying on the bottom.

In a short time after the Almatia was built Captain Smith was able to buy Mr. Souther's interest, and made thirty-seven trips in her to Curacoa. The Almatia later, while under the command of Captain Merriitt, of Scituate, was wrecked on Cape Cod. Captain Smith then bought, in 1852, the full-rigged brig George Otis, and sold her in France. The next vessel which he commanded, and of which he owned a quarter, was the 283-ton bark Martha Allen, built at Scituate in 1849, which he sold in Smyrna. He then bought the 453-ton ship Sarah, in which he made several voyages. On one of his voyages he found himself at Buenos Ayres, unable to obtain a cargo home. He therefore went to Turks Island for a load of salt, and while there bought at a bargain two brigs, which had been washed ashore by a tidal wave. On his return to Cohasset he succeeded in interesting Mr. Isaac Hall in the project, and they fitted out the Sarah, manned by a crew of Cohasset men, returned to Turks Island, got the brigs off, and brought them to Boston.

These brigs were named the Mungo Park and the River Belle. Captain Smith commanded one, Isaac Hall the other, and Joe Ware the Sarah.

The next voyage of the Sarah was to Charleston, S. C., under the command of Captain Henry Merriitt, where she was to load for France, but off Cape Hatteras the vessel took fire and was a total loss. The crew, of which George H. Smith, the captain's son, was one, escaped in boats and were picked up and taken into Savannah.

In 1856 Captain Smith took command of the bark Quincy, built at Quincy, and owned by John T. Shattuck, in which he made a voyage to Curacoa and back with Christopher Collier as mate. Under the date of May 7, 1857, appears the record in the Register of the Boston Custom House of the 473-ton bark Almatia, owned by James Gould and Joseph Young, and built by William Hall of Boston, Joseph H. Smith, captain. The only bark Almatia of which George H. Smith has any recollection, with which his father had any connection, was built at about that time of about that tonnage, but was built at Scituate by the Briggs Brothers, and owned by Captain Smith and A. H. Tower. George Smith and D. N. Tower, young boys then, went down to the launching. Mr. C. A. Cousens had the contract for making her sails, which was his first contract.

The Almatia was sold as soon as she was loaded, and Captain Smith never sailed as her master. From "Shipbuilding on the North River," by L. Vernon Briggs, we quote, "The last vessel built by Sylvester and Barnabas Briggs was the bark Eveline, 650 tons, for Captain Joseph H. Smith, of Cohasset. She was begun February 10, 1859. She made a remarkably quick passage on her first trip, arriving at her port two days before she was due."

He next owned and sailed, in 1860, the 922-ton ship Rockland, in which he made a number of voyages to New Orleans, and sold her in London. At this time the War of the Rebellion was in progress, and Captain Smith obtained a government contract to clean the bottoms of vessels at Port Royal, S. C., and stayed there two years or more, his son, George, being with him.

At the close of the war he took command for the firm of F. Nickerson & Company the 671-ton steamer Aurora. The Aurora was bought from the United States Government, and was formerly called the Itasca. This vessel Captain Smith sold in Callao to the Peruvian Government. This was his last voyage. After his retirement from sea, he acted as Underwriter's Agent for the Boston Insurance Company.

Captain Smith united with good seamanship an unusual capacity for business, which enabled him to take advantage of opportunities offering which other captains would have failed to see.

He died in Cohasset, December 28, 1879.

JACOB FLINT BATES was born in Cohasset, August 8, 1822, in the house now owned by his niece, Mrs. Nathan Manasse. His paternal grandfather, Samuel Bates, was lost in his schooner off the Rocks outside Cohasset harbor, and his maternal grandfather, Nathaniel Nichols, known as "Captain Than," was at one time captain of a revenue cutter.

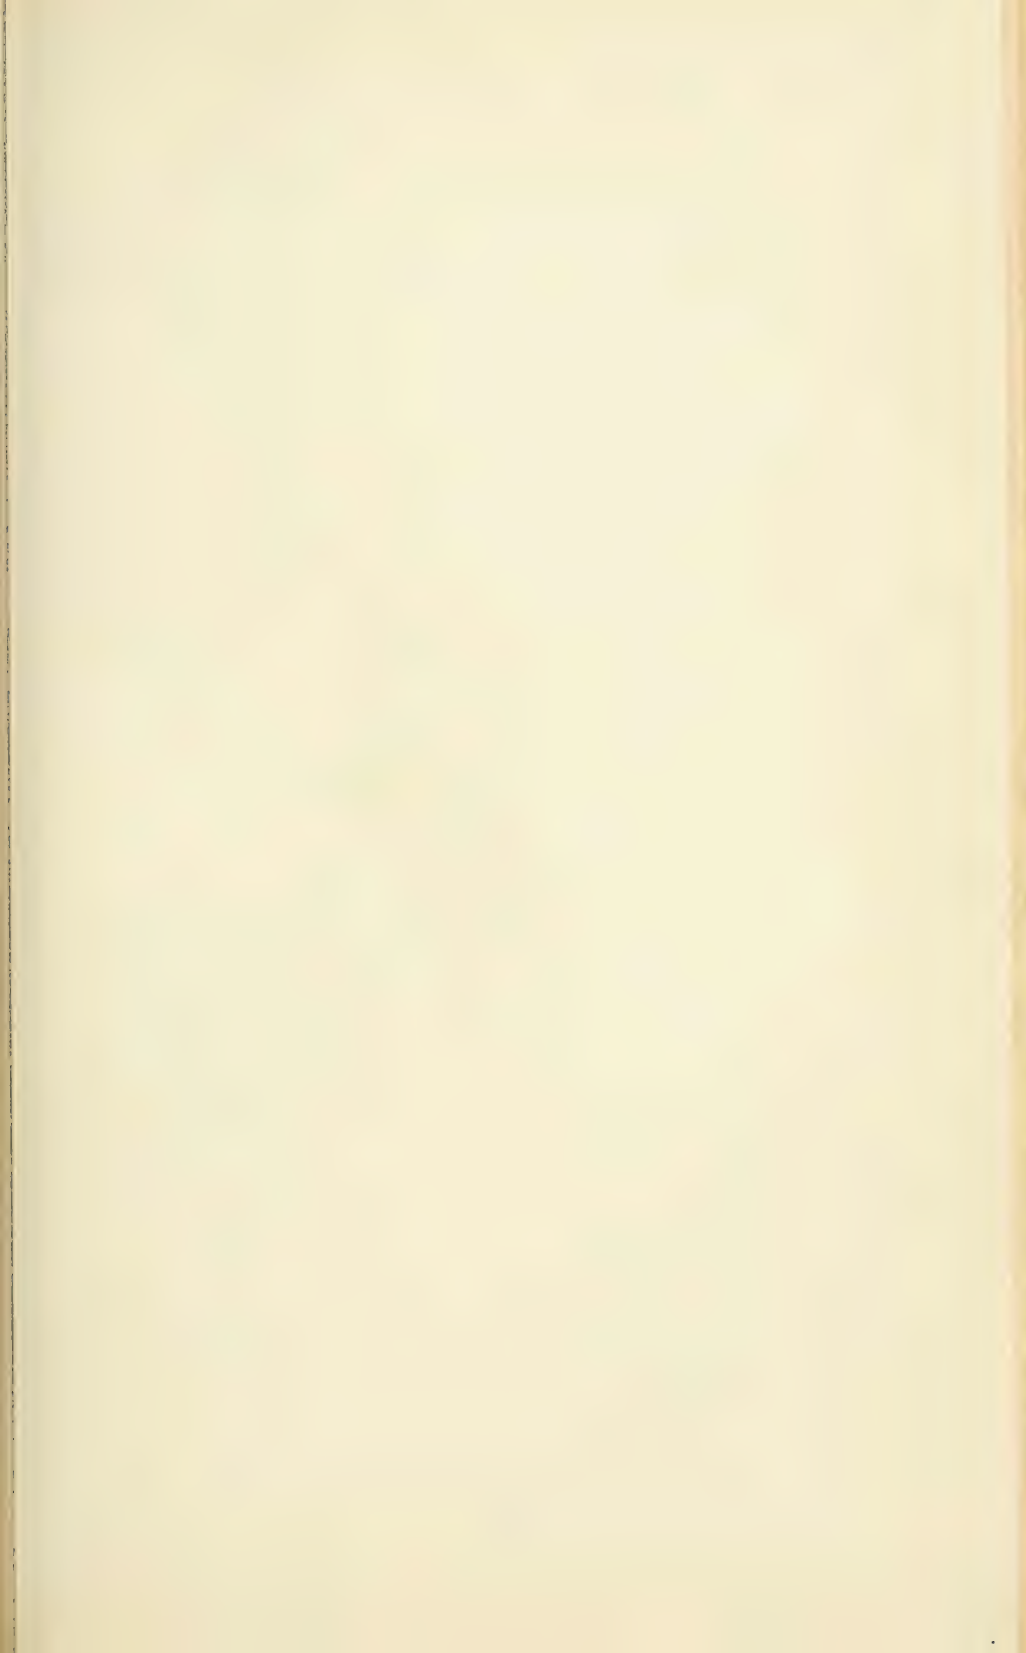

After learning the carpenter's trade in Boston and trying for a few months to become an apothecary, he took up the calling which was to be his through life, and which has drawn so many Cohasset boys away from trades and shops — the calling of a sailor.

Probably his first deep sea voyage was made in the bark Hobart early in 1842, when under the command of Captain James Collier she made a trip from New York to Charleston, Bordeaux, New Orleans, and back to New York.

In October of the same year he again shipped on the Hobart for a voyage to South America, but as has already been told in the life of Captain James Collier, did not get back to New York until 1847, when he returned as first mate of the Hobart. It must have been hard for these Cohasset boys on their arrival in New York to find that their return to Cohasset was to be deferred for a short time. The famine in Ireland called for provisions and the Hobart was chartered to carry a cargo to the sufferers in that stricken country. On his return to Cohasset he married, in December, 1847, Caroline Lothrop Bates. The next year he served as first mate on the brig Monserat under the command of his brother-in-law, Captain Collier, on a voyage from New York to Porto Rico and return.

At the completion of this voyage he took command of the brig Allen King, plying between New York and ports in South America. On one of these voyages in 1850 he was accompanied by his wife and infant daughter. In 1851 the Allen King was wrecked on a coral reef off the coast of Balize. No blame attached to the captain of the brig for this disaster, as the reef lay further off shore than was represented on the map, and the absence of breakers prevented discovery of the danger lurking beneath the calm surface of the ocean. No lives were lost, and the passengers and crew were safely landed at Balize.

The next command of Captain Bates was the William Alden, in which he sailed in the same trade between New York and Balize until 1857, when he took command of the bark Honduras, a new vessel built for him under his supervision on East River, New York. In this vessel Captain Bates was a large shareholder. For ten years he commanded the Honduras, making voyages to Balize, Buenos Ayres, Montevideo, and other South American ports, stopping often at the West Indies for a return cargo. During a part of this time the War of the Rebellion was going on, and all the vigilance of Captain Bates was necessary to prevent the Honduras from falling into the hands of the Confederate privateers.

BARK "JAMES L. PENDERGAST," Jacob F. Bates, Commander.

From 1861 to 1863 Captain Bates remained on shore cultivating the farm he had bought at Hempstead, Long Island, where his two younger daughters were born.

In 1870 Captain Bates, like so many other natives of Cohasset, returned to the home of his birth and established his family in the house on South Main Street, which was his home until his death.

His next command was the bark James L. Pendergast, in which vessel he sailed for eleven years, making voyages between America and Europe. Not all of these voyages were over untroubled seas, for in the possession of the family of Captain Bates is a picture of the Pendergast, depicted riding the mountainous waves with only the foresails set. This picture was executed in Havre by an artist who followed the description by Captain Bates of the storm which threatened to engulf the Pendergast. No wonder that the thoughts of Captain Bates reverted to the sad fate of his boyhood shipmate, Captain James Hall, as his vessel scudded before the gale.

In 1881 the Pendergast made a trip to Capetown, thence across the Indian Ocean to Java, from there to Singapore, and thence home. At the completion of this long voyage Captain Bates took a summer's rest at his Cohasset home.

In the fall of 1882 he took on a new command, the bark Thomas Fletcher, and sailed November 9th to England, but on the return voyage encountered such terrific gales in the English Channel that he was obliged to put in to Falmouth with all the masts sprung and one gone by the board. On his return to New York he sailed for Brunswick, Georgia, where he loaded with lumber for Buenos Ayres, and from this city, which had been one of the first foreign ports he had visited as a young man, and which had been his goal for so many voyages since, he sailed back and forth several times to Montreal and Quebec, or to Brunswick, Georgia.

On the 20th of August, 1885, the Thomas Fletcher sailed from Quebec on what proved to be her last voyage, her destination Buenos Ayres. After eighty-seven days of slow sailing she had come to within about eight hundred miles of her destination, when a violent gale with heavy seas sprang up, and the deck load began to slip into the ocean as the Fletcher put her sail under water. Soon the straining of the vessel opened her seams, and the crew were put to the pumps. Still the water gained and at midnight had broken into the cabin from below, when the attempt to keep the waterlogged vessel clear by pumping was given up.

In rapid succession the log book describes the throwing overboard of the remaining deck-load, the bursting open of the seams of the deck, the carrying away of the lee pin-rail and bulwarks, the houses on deck nearly full of water and commencing to break up, provisions and wearing apparel spoiled, soaked and washed away, the water tanks below deck covered with sea water, and the one on deck only protected from the constant surge of the waves by the small portion of the deck load kept for that purpose, sails set to steady the vessel, only to be blown to ribbons.

For twelve days the Thomas Fletcher, now little more than a water-logged hulk, drifted toward her destination, the boats in readiness to be launched at the first sign of her breaking up, the masts still standing, but the axes handy in case it should be necessary to cut some of them away to keep the bark afloat, all hands anxiously on the lookout for a sail. At length, twelve days after the first gale had struck her, the Thomas Fletcher limped into the harbor of Montevideo, still one hundred miles from the city of Buenos Ayres. With the help of a tug this voyage was made at the rate of five miles per day, until on December 21, 1885, four months from the day she left Quebec, a period longer than is sometimes taken for the voyage round the Horn to San Francisco, the Fletcher tied up at the wharf of Buenos Ayres and began to unload the cargo of water-soaked lumber which she had carried in her hold so many weary days.

After unloading, the bark was condemned as unseaworthy, and sold at auction. No doubt the feeling in Captain Bates's mind was something akin to that of David Harum's in regard to his balky horse when he remarked, "The' was times when if he'd a fell down dead, I wouldn't hev figgered on puttin' a band on my hat."

June 17, 1886, Captain Bates arrived in Cohasset, anticipating that he had made his last voyage. But his old bark, the James L.

Pendergast, was at New York, and her owners, E. D. Morgan & Co., commissioned Captain Bates to fit her out for a trip to France. When the bark was ready for sea, Captain Bates could not resist the temptation of making one more trip as her master. So on August 11, 1887, he sailed from New York on his last voyage. The voyage was to Rouen, France, thence to Georgia, from Georgia to South America, and back home to New York, where on the 11th of October, 1888, he ended forty-four years of seagoing.

If Captain Bates possessed one characteristic which distinguished him from other men of his calling, it was his gentleness. The discipline on board the vessels he commanded, which was excellent, was obtained by courteous and kind treatment. He was so tender-hearted that he could not bear to see suffering, even in animals, and on one occasion laid his vessel to to pick up a cat which had fallen overboard. Much of his life had been spent in the Spanish ports of Europe and South America, and by study he became master of the Spanish language.

While in the ports and cities of France he turned his attention to the language of that country, and attained to some proficiency in it. His spare time on board ship was spent in the perusal of good literature, and his mind was singularly well stored with information gained by the improvement of these leisure hours.

His capacity for enjoying the strange sights of the foreign cities he visited was immense, and his only regret was in the fact that he did not have the members of his family with him to share his pleasure. On many occasions when his voyages brought him into South American ports he found the yellow fever raging there, but he was singularly immune to this disease, as much probably from his correct habits of life and careful manner of living as from anything peculiar in his constitution. He was ever ready to act as attendant to members of his crew or countrymen stricken with this disease in a foreign land, nursing them back to life or comforting their last moments on earth with his soothing ministrations.

He died at his home in Cohasset in the year 1898, one to whom the words of Shakespeare may fitly be applied, — "His life was gentle and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, 'This was a man.'"

As has been said early in this chapter, there were three Cohasset boys on the clipper ship Storm King, making their first voyage on a new ship. These were JOHN HALL, EZEKIEL MARSHALL, and SAMUEL P. BATES. The first of these was the cousin of the captain, and his father, Samuel Hall, had been a captain of fishing and coasting vessels.

During the War of the Rebellion, John Hall served in the navy, and at the expiration of his term served as mate on steamers plying between Valparaiso and Panama. He finally became captain of one of these steamers.

Ezekiel Marshall early in life went to the Pacific coast of the United States, where he arose to be captain of a vessel, but finally entered the lumber business.

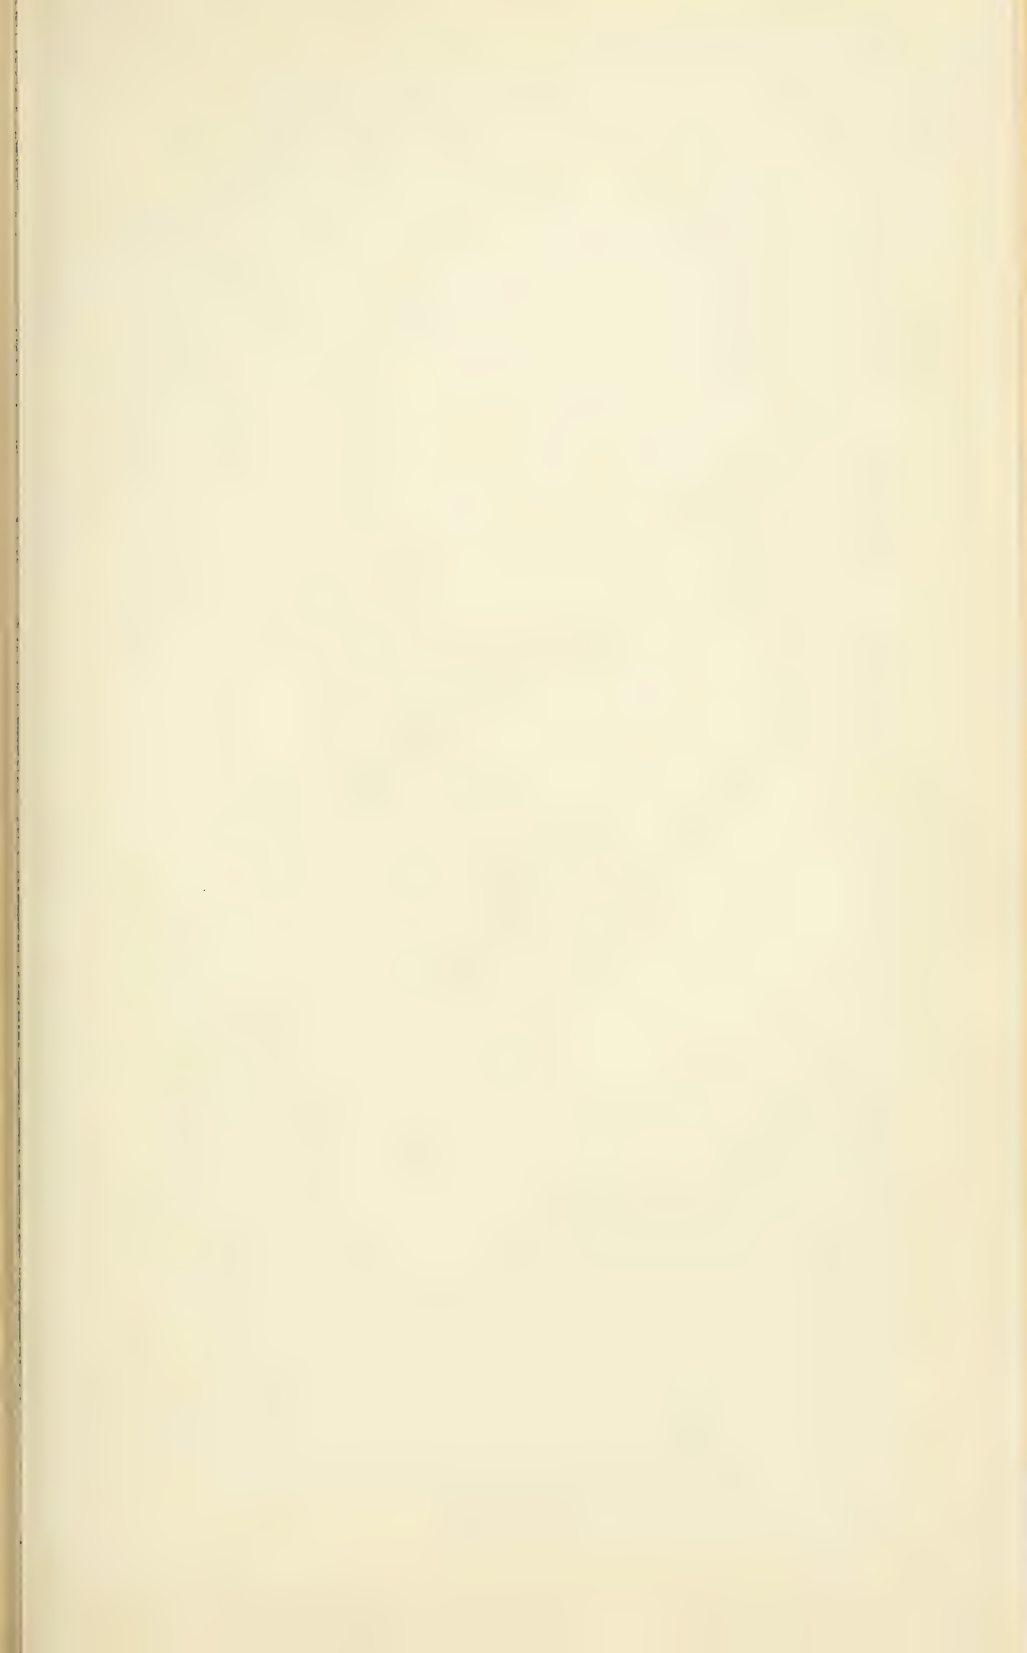

Samuel P. Bates, a nephew of the captain of the Storm King, remained with him after the voyage in the Storm King was completed, and rose through the grades from boy to ordinary seaman, thence to able seaman, finally becoming first officer of the Tecumseh, North America, and Pharos; he also served under Captain John Warren Bates on the Flying Eagle.

His first command was the schooner M. A. Snow, owned by Ephraim Snow, of Cohasset, which he took from Boston to San Francisco. On this voyage, off the coast of Chili, he took a crew from their shipwrecked vessel and carried them into Valparaiso. In spite of this detention the trip was made from Boston to San Francisco in 140 days, which for so small a vessel, about 100 tons, was a very good passage.

After arriving on the Pacific coast, Captain Bates made his home there, entering the employ of J. W. Ralston & Co., of San Francisco, trading between that port and Bellingham Bay. He also made voyages to Australia and China, commanding various ships, among them, it is said, being the old Amethyst, in which his townsman, Joseph Willcut, had sailed a half century before. During his lifetime he visited nearly all the important ports of the world, and his voyages were made without any serious accident.

Captain Bates, like many men who have traveled far and seen much, was of a quiet, unassuming disposition, making friends both at home and abroad. By his integrity and straightforwardness he won the esteem and confidence of his employers, who valued him not less as a friend than as an employee. In 1884 he retired from the sea and spent the last years of his life in Cohasset, where he died June 10, 1908, the last of Cohasset's deep sea captains residing in the town.

CAPTAIN HARRISON P. SNOW, now living at Nantasket, is the last survivor of Cohasset's deep sea captains. His father was Captain Ephraim Snow, who owned a fleet of fishing schooners, having a wharf on the northerly side of the Cove. This business was later transferred to East Boston.

Captain Snow made his first voyage as captain in the year 1863, when he took the 132-ton schooner, the H. N. Ruggles, from Boston to Valparaiso, thence to San Francisco, where he sold her and came home. This vessel was owned, one-eighth by Harrison P. Snow, three-eighths by Ephraim Snow, one-eighth by Calvin Merriam of Cohasset, and three-eighths by Bela F. Jacobs of South Scituate.

The bark Ethan Allen was then bought, and for four years Captain Snow commanded her in voyages to Honolulu, San Francisco, China, and Australia. In 1871 he returned to Cohasset, and for a few years remained on shore. He then sailed in the fruit trade between Philadelphia and the West Indies in the schooner White Wing and the steamer Gulnare.

In 1879 he went as first mate on the ship Highland Light from New York to Japan and return. In 1882 he gave up the sea altogether, and since that time has been with the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company as Wharf Agent.

In addition to the 135 vessels mentioned in the "Narrative History of Cohasset" as having been built in Cohasset, we append a list of other vessels built there, which have been found by the writer of this chapter in turning over every leaf in the registers at the Boston Custom House from the year 1806 to 1870.

This, of course, gives the names only of such vessels as were registered for deep sea voyages, as the author was searching primarily for deep sea captains and vessels. The enrollment book of the Port of Cohasset, if it could be found (and it is probably stowed away in some attic), might furnish other names. There would doubtless be found the enrollment of the bark Hobart, June 10, 1840, there also the enrollment of the ship Grand Turk. In regard to the latter vessel there seems to be a mystery which cannot be fathomed.

The diary of Joel Willcutt has these two entries, "1829, February 5, the ship Grand Turk launched this day." "February 8, the new ship went to Boston." But she is neither enrolled nor registered in Boston, nor does the register of the Port of Salem bear her name, although two other Grand Turks were built for E. H. Derby of that city, one of them, built in 1781, hailing from the "South Shore."

Possibly the owner of the Cohasset Grand Turk, on making application for a register, found there was already a ship afloat under that name and took the name of the Hellespont, which ship, hailing from Cohasset, was registered in Boston in April of the same year. But this is only surmise.

The registers of the Boston Custom House from 1789 to 1806 are in Washington, and there seems no probability of their ever being returned. These registers probably contain the names of other vessels built at Cohasset. At this point the author wishes to express his appreciation of the labor of the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow in collecting his data on ship building in Cohasset for the Narrative History, an appreciation formed by going painfully over the same ground.

The author is indebted to Mr. John Robinson, of the Marine Department of the Peabody Museum, Salem, for the following information in regard to Cohasset-built vessels owned in Salem:—

Schooner Whim, 100 tons, 1794, owned by John Derby.

Schooner Minerva, 103 tons, 1799, owned by James Silver and others.

Ship Nerva, 277 tons, 1805, owned by Simon Forrester and others.

Schooner Speedwell, 96 tons, 1811, owned by James Odell, 1824.

Brig Charles Doggett, 100 tons, 1826, owned by the Rogers firm in 1831 and attacked by natives at Fiji in 1833, the mate and five men killed. See "Historical Sketch of Salem," p. 171.

Bark Statesman, 258 tons, 1826, owned by Timothy Bryant and others, 1836.

Brig Russell, 126 tons, 1835, owned by David Pingree, 1844.

Brig Eliza Burgess, 167 tons, 1838, owned by Chas. H. Fabens and others in Salem, 1855.

Bark Catherine, 226 tons, 1840, owned by William Hunt and Robert Brookhouse, 1849.

Bark William Schroder, 338 tons, 1840, owned by George West, David Pingree and others, 1844.

Bark Lewis, 217 tons, 1841, owned by George West and others in 1848.

Bark Europa, 397 tons, 1849, owned by B. W. Stone and others of Salem.

To Mr. G. F. Dow, secretary of the Essex Institute, Salem, the author is indebted for the loan of the cuts of the William Schroder and the Eliza Burgess.

It seems strange that no vessel launched from Cohasset was given the name of the town from which it hailed, but the ship Conohasset is the only namesake of Cohasset built in Cohasset. The registry of the Boston Custom House has a 63-ton schooner built in Boston in 1835 named Cohasset, and owned by James Huckins and Horace Scudder.

The author lets this chapter go from his hands with a feeling of satisfaction that at this late day and with limited time at his command, he has been able to get so much, but with a deep feeling of regret that he was able to obtain so little concerning so many of Cohasset's deep sea captains.

WRECKS, WRECKING AND LIFE SAVING IN COHASSET.

BY OLIVER H. HOWE.

The Narrative History of Cohasset has mentioned a few of the wrecks which occurred off Cohasset, and has given full particulars of the notable wreck of the emigrant ship St. John in 1849. The following account of some additional disasters with incidental life-saving and salvage of property may be of interest. The earliest records obtainable are in the diary of Joel Willcutt. (See page 478 of this volume.) These quaint entries show the close sympathy of the people of this sea-faring town with disasters of this kind. With Christian services they buried many of the dead and if the tale could be written of those wounded and frost-bitten who were nursed and cared for in Cohasset homes and sent on their way rejoicing, it would make a long chapter. The following entries in Mr Willcutt's diary have been copied verbatim.

Further testimony to the heroism of Cohasset men is found in the records of the Humane Society of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (instituted 1785). A few items gleaned from the reports of this Society are as follows.

1793 To Sundry Inhabitants of Cohasset 5 Guineas.

1807 & 1808 To L. Jenkins, William Pratt John Carr and James Damon $8.

L. Stephenson Gold Medal.

Newcomb Bates et al. Gold Medals.

1815 Henry Doane, George Hall, Obadiah Lincoln and Levi Oakes, Gold Medals.

1831 John Barker, H. J. Turner & J. J. Lothrop Gold Medals.

1849 M. J. Brennick Bronze Medal.

1850 To six men, crew of the Society's life boat at Cohasset $30.

Probably some other names in the Society's record belong to Cohasset, but those only are mentioned that can be identified. Some other awards are mentioned later in this chapter in connection with the services rendered.

About 1830 the schooner Rosebud (probably running as a packet between New York and Boston) was wrecked on Bassing Beach. The cargo was saved by Cohasset men, and the vessel is said to have been only slightly damaged.

On April 12, 1831 the schooner Boston was wrecked on Chest Ledge. The captain, named Webber had lashed himself to the mast and when the schooner struck he tried to get free to help save the vessel. Just as he became free he was washed overboard by a heavy sea and drowned. Owing to the prompt exertions of George W. Collier and others from the shore, all the crew were saved. Mr Collier saw the wreck from his home (the old Collier house at North Scituate Beach). Hastening to Cohasset he collected a crew of seven men, who, carrying a boat across Bassing Beach, went to the rescue of the shipwrecked sailors. For this brave work the Mass. Humane Society gave gold medals to George W. Collier and seven others. Six of the others are said to be Capt. John Barker, John Lothrop, Lewis Willcutt, Samuel Stockbridge, Joseph Briggs and probably James Collier. Some are said to have received $10. in preference to the medal.

At about 1840 the Swedish brig Copenhagen struck on the Sea Ledges, badly injuring her bottom. The rising tide and heavy sea drove her over the ledge, and she shortly after grounded on Brush Island. She was loaded with hemp and with Russian crash and duck, and Cohasset men were hard at work unloading her while people of all ages were busy along the shore "fishing up the crash." The tale is told that when the bales of hemp were examined by the Custom House officer and compared with the bill-oflading, only one bale was missing. It is said that later a Cohasset fisherman grappled and raised the last bale, and that the Custom House officials remarked: "How honest these Cohasset men are!"

In the spring of 1843 the schooner Maine struck on the ledges near Pleasant Beach, and went to pieces. As she broke up, a large portion of the quarter-deck, with three men clinging to it, was carried by the sea close to the rock in the middle of Pleasant Beach. The men jumped upon the rock and were safe, and the next instant the wreckage glided out from under them and was dashed to kindling wood against the ledges on what is now the Kimball property. The vessel was loaded with shoes, and many of the people obtained a long supply of foot gear from the beaches. In November, 1843, the brig Melazo struck on East Shag rock and drifted to between Gull and Shepard's ledges. Her cargo of sugar in boxes was saved by Cohasset men, and the vessel was also saved.

Perhaps the most notable work of wrecking by Cohasset men was in connection with the ship Alabama. On the night before Thanksgiving in 1847 she struck on Minots Ledge where the lighthouse was later erected, and drifted about two miles to the eastward, where she sank in ninety feet of water. Her topgallant masts are said to have been visible above the water, but in the following February they disappeared as the vessel broke open. Some of the cabin fittings came ashore at White Head. Capt. George Hall is said to have re-discovered the locality of the wreck by noticing a peculiar yellow appearance in the water. The Alabama was a large ship for those days, and had sailed from Liverpool for Boston with a very valuable assorted cargo, consisting of china and crockery ware, tools, cutlery, railroad iron, chains of various kinds and sizes, and carpets, shawls, and other fabrics.

In early summer a number of Cohasset men under the lead of Capt. Nichols Tower, who was Underwriter's Agent and wrecking master, formed a company and made elaborate preparations to save the cargo. They secured the schooner Anaconda and had a particular form of tongs made at the blacksmith shop of Mr. Prentiss at the Cove (in the building later used for a store by Mr. Caleb F. Nichols). The wreck was too deep for work by diving operations, but a diver in a suit was sent down to reconnoitre. He found the vessel broken open and some crockery dishes strewn upon the bottom. By means of the tongs, crates of crockery ware could be caught and brought to the surface with their contents uninjured. Cutlery and chains were found packed in casks. Tools of various kinds were secured in abundance, and all the carpenters in town were provided with fine new saws. A curious and almost incredible statement is made that polished tools and cutlery exposed to the action of salt water at that depth did not rust, because away from the air, but that they would immediately begin to rust as soon as laid upon the deck. Many families were supplied with crockery; and plates, bowls, and tea-pots from the Alabama can be found in Cohasset to-day. The ladies secured some of the shawls, but on wearing them some mischievous boy was apt to cry out: "Alabama!" and their popularity as an outside wrap suddenly declined.

The tongs used were of several patterns and sizes, and varied in length from two to eight feet. They had strong, sharp jaws, and were so constructed that their weight kept them open. A special line or chain closed the jaws when desired, and they could then be drawn up with their prize. The tongs were also used for breaking apart portions of the wreck to get at the cargo. The Cohasset men worked upon this wreck for three summers, securing a very valuable amount of merchandise. The whole undertaking is one of great enterprise and skill and must have been difficult from the great depth of the water. The locality was known to fishermen as the "Alabama ground" for many years.

On Feb. 5, 1849, at 4 A.M., in a driving northeast snowstorm, the ship Jennie Lind, loaded with cotton, was wrecked on North Scituate Beach, abreast of the old Collier house. To show the great trials of some of these navigators, the captain of this ship said that he "had been in Boston bay for nine days and had not in that time seen the sun, moon or stars." The crew were safely landed and the cotton unloaded, after which, by dint of great exertion for seventeen days and the use of oil-casks, the vessel was floated and saved. In all this work, as well as that on another cotton ship named Dublin, which was also saved, Cohasset men took the leading part, and the cotton was teamed to Cohasset, mostly with oxen, and shipped by the newly-opened South Shore Railroad.

On October 3, 1851, the bark Vesta, Captain Flynn (the vessel being only two years old), loaded with coal, struck the back of Gull Ledge. Cohasset men discharged the cargo, and she was brought in and beached on the point now owned by Mr. C. W. Barron. John Bates of Cohasset bought her, but she was later sold, and made some long voyages under Captain Percival, on one of which she had John L. Pratt, as second mate, and Daniel Bray Lincoln, Nathaniel W. Treat, and John Murphy, all of Cohasset, as seamen. Later she sailed under a foreign flag, and is said to have been still afloat near the end of the century.

On April 8, 1852, the brig Marriel of Belfast, Me., Captain Staples, was wrecked on East Hogshead Ledge, and all hands were lost. Her spars came ashore on Sandy Beach, and the bodies of the crew were found inside Brush Island. She was loaded with turpentine and hides from Darien, Ga.

On January 29, 1853, the bark Maryland, Captain Davis, was caught in a hurricane, and her crew could not reef topsails quickly enough to prevent their being torn to ribbons. She came alongside the light-ship, then stationed at Minots, and tried to anchor. Failing in this, she struck the north side of Gull Ledge, and drifted into Briggs Harbor, where she was beached. She had an assorted cargo from Baltimore, which was unloaded by Cohasset men, under Captain Daniel Lothrop. The cargo was carried by lighters to the inner side of White Head, whence it was conveyed to Boston by packets. The bark was successfully floated and repaired.

On January 19, 1857, a very destructive storm wrecked two fine vessels upon our shore in one day. The first was the bark New Empire (briefly referred to in "Narrative History of Cohasset," p. 473). She was loaded with cotton, and wrecked about 300 feet from White Head. The rescue of her crew is notable for ingenuity and bravery. The sea was covered with broken and treacherous ice, of the kind known as "porridge," making it impracticable to use a boat and unsafe to attempt to walk upon it. A Cohasset man, named Peter Falcon, walked to the wreck by stepping upon two oblong rubber life-preservers, which he moved forward alternately as he proceeded over the broken ice. In this way he brought a sounding line to the shore, by means of which finally a hawser was carried across. A skiff was then pulled over the ice, and later a dory. Twelve men from the shore were thus drawn out to the wreck to haul the lines and render other assistance. The crew were all saved, including one with a broken leg and another with a dislocated shoulder. They were all taken to the house of John J. Lothrop, at Sandy Cove*. As the snow was very deep and the roads impassible, our life-savers next turned their attention to rescuing Dr. Foster, who was trying to reach the injured men, but became buried in a snowdrift. They dug out his horse, and unhitching him from the shafts, drew the sleigh themselves for the last half mile.

For the courageous work in rescuing the crew of the New Empire the Massachusetts Humane Society gave Peter Falcon a silver medal and $10, and a bronze medal to each of the following: Isaac Pratt, Henry Collier, Nathaniel W. Treat, Alexander Litchfield, M. B. Stetson, Loring Bates, and L. Jenkins. The New Empire was saved and re-fitted.

It would seem that our Cohasset life-savers might well have been exhausted after this severe experience, but new work awaited them, for the same evening the ship California had struck on Black Ledge and had pounded heavily during the night. Three men on board had taken refuge on the ledge, which is a quarter of a mile from shore. The California had parted chains and drifted from Gloucester, where she was discharging cargo, and the men on board were not the crew, but ship-keepers. As soon as morning light came to their aid, our Cohasset men must hurry to Kimball's point to save the three men who were in peril. The same "porridge" confronted them here, and they came hastily, even without lines to assist them. Quickly seizing a dory and being unable to walk on the field ice, a number of men, by sprawling on their hands and knees, were able to push and pull the dory to the ledge. They then assisted the three men into the boat and attempted to return to the shore in the same manner. When hardly more than 100 feet from the ledge, the dory settled through the ice so badly that the men could no longer move her.

* In this house had been received in 1849 the survivors of the ill-fated ship St. John. Later the house was for many years kept as a boarding-house and known as the "Lothrop House" or as "Mrs. Winslow's Cottage." Like the Warren Bates house, it furnished the first introduction to Cohasset for many of our present summer residents.

In the meantime a skiff, manned by Nathaniel W. Treat, Thomas Tower, and a Mr. Leighton had been pushed out from Kimball's Point to within 50 feet of the dory, and had passed a line to the latter. The skiff formed a foothold from which to pull upon the dory. While this was in progress, men on the shore had laid hold of a pile of spruce floor boards which had come ashore from the deck-load of some schooner, and by stretching these upon the ice, men were able to walk out upon them, carrying the rope of the fire-engine which had been hastily brought from the village. Time had been precious, for the field ice was already moving down the shore with the outgoing tide, but two hundred willing hands on the beach soon drew both boats ashore with their living freight. The frost-bitten men were cared for at the house of Mr. Peter C. Kimball. That Cohasset men could save every life exposed in the wrecks of these two vessels, in zero weather, testifies to their pluck and bravery. Dr. Foster's sleigh was again pulled by men to the relief of these frost bitten seamen: this time being drawn over the ice, across Little Harbor. The cold was so extreme at this time that no salt water was visible from the highest rocks, and the lightship anchored two miles or more to the northeast of Minots Ledge was completely surrounded with ice.

For services in saving men on the California the Massachusetts Humane Society gave "certificates" to Peter C. Kimball and Patrick Sullivan, and $2 each to the following: Aaron Pratt, Manuel Antoine, Loring Bates, Nathaniel W. Treat, Charles Studley, Warren Bates, Cornelius Lincoln, Frederick Tower, Frank Antoine, Samuel Groce, Joseph Chadbourn, Frederick Torrey, David Stoddard, Lincoln Jenkins, James Edwards, James Pettee, William Doane, and John Powers.

These grim perils were not without their pleasantries, for as soon as the lives were saved, some attention must be paid to the cargo. As this ship was loaded with gin and sugar it was considered by some to be very attractive. Peter Falcon, the sure-footed, was returning from the ledge with a gallon bottle of gin under his arm, when one foot slumped through the ice and crack went his bottle, saving only a pint in the bottom. How to get this pint safely ashore was the problem — one which he solved by promptly drinking it. Some men who did not break their bottles didn't get home at all that night. The next day the town turned out to save the sugar, and brought it home in tubs, kegs, bags, pillow cases, and even stocking legs. They had enough to sweeten them for a long time.

On April 15, 1857, the bark Nueces, from Galveston, for Boston, with a cargo of cotton, hides, and pecan nuts, came into the bay during a snowstorm, and made the Minot Ledge light-ship. The captain, supposing it to be Thatcher's Island lights, shaped his course accordingly for Boston Light, which course carried him to the south of Black Rocks. Seeing his mistake, he came to anchor, but the anchor not holding, he cut away his masts and the bark slowly kedged in upon the shore about the center of Green Hill. The crew, with three lady passengers, were landed safely with the help of the townspeople. Part of the cargo was saved by rolling it over Green Hill, and the remainder was loaded upon lighters. Capt. Joseph H. Smith of Cohasset discharged the cargo by contract. After about two weeks the bark was floated with the aid of the steamer R. B. Forbes, and taken to Boston for repairs. It was in rescuing this crew that Captain Frederick Tower of Cohasset nearly lost his life. Fastening a rope about his waist he plunged into the surf and carried it to the bark, but in doing so, narrowly escaped being crushed between the vessel's side and a huge boulder. This boulder remains by Green Hill now and is said to have been pushed to its present position by the vessel. A hawser was then drawn across and made fast at the top of Green Hill. Passengers and crew were then saved by lashing each into an arm-chair, and drawing it along the hawser to the top of the hill.

On Jan. 6, 1858 the ship Serampur struck a ledge off Pleasant Beach. The crew were saved in a lifeboat. The cargo was an assorted one from New Orleans, consisting of flour, whiskey, syrup, hides, and lead. The flour came handy for many of the townspeople, especially as the underwriters valued it at only $4 a barrel, although flour was then selling for $8. A citizen could buy a barrel he had saved by payment of $2. There are rumors of barrels of whiskey being carefully buried in the beaches for future use. The eagle which for many years has ornamented the front of Independence fire-engine house came from the stern of the Serampur.

On January 28, 1859, the ship Roebuck, commanded by Captain Soule of Hingham, loaded with cotton from New Orleans was wrecked on the "West Willies." She lay there a week, and while being unloaded, a storm came and broke her to pieces. Many bales of her cotton were chewed up as she ground on the ledges, so that all the neighboring shores were covered with white cotton, washed up like seaweed. Many sunken bales were raised by grapples, and about 100 bales came ashore whole. All (even the loose cotton) was disposed of at good salvage (40 per cent).

On March 3, 1862, the brig Lincoln of Chelsea (only two years old) struck alongside the lighthouse at 4 A.M., and split in two. She was loaded with 240 tons of coal from Hoboken. Cohasset men recovered the coal from the sea bottom. As she split open her American ensign floated out upon the water. One of the wrecking party tried to grasp it, but remarked that it would be recovered later. Singularly, after four weeks it was found in Sandy Cove. On the same night the brig Marcia, also coal-laden, went ashore back of the Glades House, and another brig was wrecked at Cedar Point, Scituate. All three of these vessels were consigned to one firm, and all were wrecked within a space of three hours.

On January 16, 1865, the brig Dawn of Day, of St. John, N. B., from Turk's Island, loaded with salt, struck first on Shepard's Ledge, and later on the big rock in the middle of Sandy Cove, and rapidly went to pieces, but the crew were saved.

In 1868 the steamer Tripoli, in a thick fog, ran upon the "East Willies," and her bow became wedged in the rocks. With the rising tide and with assistance of tugs she backed off and proceeded.

On March 2, 1868, the schooner Nathaniel G. Clark, loaded with cotton, hides, and rosin, from Charleston, S. C., anchored outside the light in a northeast gale and snowstorm, and slipping her anchors, drifted inside the "West Willies," and later inside the Hazards, and struck on the rocks. She had a crew of five men and one passenger, a young boy. Singularly, the boy was the only one saved from the wreck. When the vessel struck, the boy, following the example of the crew, climbed into the rigging. Looking down, he saw an old sailor taking refuge in the bow, under the slight shelter known to mariners as the "top gallant forecastle." The boy reasoned that this aged man was experienced, and knew the safest place, so he climbed down and joined him. As the ship pounded on the rocks the sailors in the rigging were "slatted" off and drowned, while those in the bow were safe. The old man ventured out too soon, however, and met his death as a mighty wave boarded the vessel. The boy remained in his place of safety until rescued. The vessel was a total loss.

On March 20, 1873, the bark Josephine, loaded with hides and wool, was wrecked on North Scituate Beach. The crew were saved, but the vessel was a total loss.

On March 12, 1878, the schooner Volante (a packet running between Eastport and Boston), loaded with herring and turnips, having anchored under the lee of Black Ledge, parted chains, and in a fresh north wind and snowstorm struck the rocks on Beach Island, about 200 feet west of the present breakwater. Her crew ran out on the bowsprit, jumped ashore, and took refuge in the cottage of Mr. Cutter. This happened at about the time of the celebrated "walking match," in the Town Hall and our Cohasset men, turning from one excitement to another, came down to unload the cargo. Those first arriving carried their goods to a convenient place on Beach Island and returned to the vessel for more, while another gang mysteriously loaded the booty upon a wagon and took it to Cohasset. The second gang had the easier time, and in the hurry and bustle were not discovered for some time.

On August 29, 1886, the bark Joseph A. Ropes, with a valuable cargo from Zanzibar, Africa, went ashore in a thick fog on a bar about half a mile west of the Sea Ledges, but was only slightly damaged and was pulled off in a day or two and proceeded to Boston. This vessel was totally wrecked five years later on the shore of Madagascar.

I am indebted for the materials of almost all the foregoing account to Mr. Nathaniel W. Treat. Further information and suggestions have been obtained of Mr. Caleb F. Nichols, Mr. William E. Crocker, Mr. Henry H. Sylvester, Mr. George R. Howe, and Miss Joanna N. Collier.

The violent storm of November 25 to 28, 1888, appears to have brought disaster along our shore to a greater number of vessels, whose names can be identified, than any other of which we have record. Between Scituate harbor and Boston, no less than fifteen vessels were wrecked. The storm was of unusual violence and duration, and the wind reached a velocity of 60 miles an hour. The wrecks at Scituate were the schooner Edward H. Norton, with loss of fifteen lives, at the First Cliff, and the schooner J. and J. Locke, at the Sand Hills. At Cohasset the fishing schooner Stella Lee of Portland, Maine, 80 tons burden, came ashore at Bassing Beach, having been blown out of Gloucester Harbor by the violence of the wind. She was not injured and was floated in safety.

The schooner Sasanoa, of and for Bath, in ballast, also parted her chains in Gloucester Harbor; her crew escaped to another vessel, and she came ashore at Pleasant Beach, and was landed high and dry. She was of 79 tons, built in 1871, and remained on the beach for several years as a picturesque landmark until unfortunately set on fire and burned. The Sasanoa had a number of times brought coal to Cohasset.

The most melancholy disaster in our vicinity was that of the steam collier Allentown, which undoubtedly foundered off Cohasset with all on board. Large quantities of her wreckage came ashore on all our beaches. The Allentown was built in Philadelphia, in 1873. She was 250 feet long, and had capacity for 1650 tons of coal. She was owned by the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and with her were lost eighteen lives.

Although only the three wrecks just named occurred on the Cohasset shore, six vessels met disaster on the shore of Hull. Their names are as follows: Schooner H. C. Higginson, on rocks below Atlantic House; schooner Mattie E. Eaton, on beach a short distance north of the last; the abandoned British brigantine Alice, at Kenberna, and schooners Cox and Green, Gertrude Abbott, and Bertha F. Walker, off Hull, near Toddy Rocks. These six wrecks made strenuous work for the men of the Hull and North Scituate Life-saving Stations, and some Cohasset men added their services. (See "Narrative History of Cohasset," p. 482.) Twenty-eight lives were rescued from these wrecks in Hull.

Besides the wrecks already mentioned, two vessels were driven ashore in Quincy, one at Spectacle Island, and one at Winthrop, by this storm, making, as stated, fifteen vessels between Scituate and Boston. It is a curious coincidence that the great gale of 1898 occurred almost precisely ten years later than the one just described. On March 9, 1890, the schooner Lucy D. Windsor of Duxbury was capsized and sunk by a squall off Chest Ledge. The crew of six were found hanging to the bottoms of dories, and were saved by D. P. Sylvester and his son, Irving. For this act they received silver medals from the Mass. Humane Society.

For an account of the wrecks in the 1898 gale see chapter in this volume, page 604.

On Sunday afternoon, September 9, 1900, the steamer John Endicott, returning from Plymouth, struck a rock in the Gangway Passage inside Minots Light, and was beached on the bar connecting Gull and Shepard's ledges. No lives were lost. Persistent attempts were made by wreckers to save the vessel, and she was for a time beached on the flats near White Head. Later she was sunk in 80 feet of water outside Boston Light while being towed to Boston. A further attempt to raise her was frustrated by a storm, and portions of the boat came ashore in Cohasset at Cuba Dam. She was an old boat, built in 1863, and originally named the Stamford.

It will be noticed that the John Endicott constitutes the only wreck off Cohasset in the past ten years. This immunity is, no doubt due to the great increase in steam navigation and to the establishment of Boston Lightship, in 1894. The building of Minots light was a considerable aid to navigation, but it directed the course of vessels too near the dangerous Cohasset rocks, and ships passing around Minots in safety might still be driven upon the ledges by a violent "Northeaster." Boston Lightship, in the middle of the bay, with plenty of deep water all around, makes a far safer mark to steer for, and its powerful fog whistle is a much better signal in thick weather than the fog bell of the lighthouse. The new entrance to Boston Harbor, with its powerful first-order lighthouse at the Graves, will altogether change the course of the larger vessels as they pass Cohasset. All this makes for safety, and it may be, let us hope, that the painful series of wrecks on our shore will never be repeated.

Enough has been recited to show the cruel nature of our rocks and ledges in time of storm, and also to prove the sturdy quality of our Cohasset men. Born and reared by the sea, they know her moods and dare to breast her dangers. The fact that the vessel was saved and repaired in eleven out of twenty-six wrecks near Cohasset enumerated in this chapter, testifies to the aid rendered from the shore. Would that every "rock-bound coast" had as brave and noble a band of life-savers!

THE GREAT GALE OF NOVEMBER 27, 1898, IN COHASSET.

BY OLIVER H. HOWE.

THE great storm of November 27, 1898, was by far the most destructive one that has visited this coast within the memory of man. A vast amount of damage was done along the New England coast and the steamer Portland was lost with all on board.

The only storm to be compared with it was the famous "Light-house Gale" of 1851. A comparison of the height of tide in the two storms may be of interest. In the "old paint shop" on the wharf near Tower's store there is an old mark with the date 1851 against it, showing the height of the tide in that great storm. Mr. Edwin Souther has made a mark in the same building for this storm  $28\frac{3}{4}$  inches above the floor and 13 inches higher than the mark of 1851. A mark of 1851 in the old "salt-house" on the other side of the Cove has been leveled across and just reaches the sill of the fire-department hose-house at the head of the Cove. The water in the 1898 storm rose still higher and put out the fire in a stove in the hose-house, thus corroborating the marks previously mentioned.\*

To make a permanent record of the height of the tide in the 1898 storm, the writer had levels taken by Mr. Daniel N. Tower, surveyor, and copper bolts inserted in the rock in three different places. The levels were taken from a mark in the boat-building shop of Arthur O. Higgins on Margin Street and from a mark made by the writer on the "old sail loft" on the afternoon of the storm. The large doors of Mr. Higgins' shop had been broken in by the sea, and the level of the water was accurately recorded by the fact that a quantity of varnish floated on the water in the shop and left its mark everywhere. The copper bolts were inserted in the following places: 1. In a ledge on Border Street near the "Village Guildhall" and nearly opposite the fire-hose houses; 2. On Border Street a short distance beyond the house of James Brennock; 3. In the vertical escarpment of the rock of "Government Island" next the "Gulf Stream." The latter locality is within the tide gate, but the level mentioned is intended to represent the level of the tide in Cohasset harbor.

* Careful surveys and comparisons show that the coast of Massachusetts is subsiding at the rate of about one foot in a century. As 47 years intervened between these two storms, the difference of 13 inches may be, in part, accounted for. Making proper deduction for subsidence, the tide in the 1898 gale would be seven and three eighths inches higher than in its predecessor. For interesting proofs of subsidence at many points along the shore, see Mass. Report of the Committee on Charles River Dam (1903) pp. 529-572.

On account of the development of our shore, there was in 1898 much more property to be injured. The two causes of injury were the terrible gale and the very high tide. The force of the wind was shown by the great number of trees prostrated. All the woodland, even that situated several miles from the shore, suffered severely. Many pieces of pine woodland had half the trees uprooted. A few trees had their trunks snapped off midway. The sawmills and some portable mills in Norwell were kept very busy during the winter and spring in disposing of fallen trees and were then unable to work them all up. The uprooting of trees was facilitated by the facts that there was no frost in the ground at the time and that the foliage of the pines was loaded with snow.

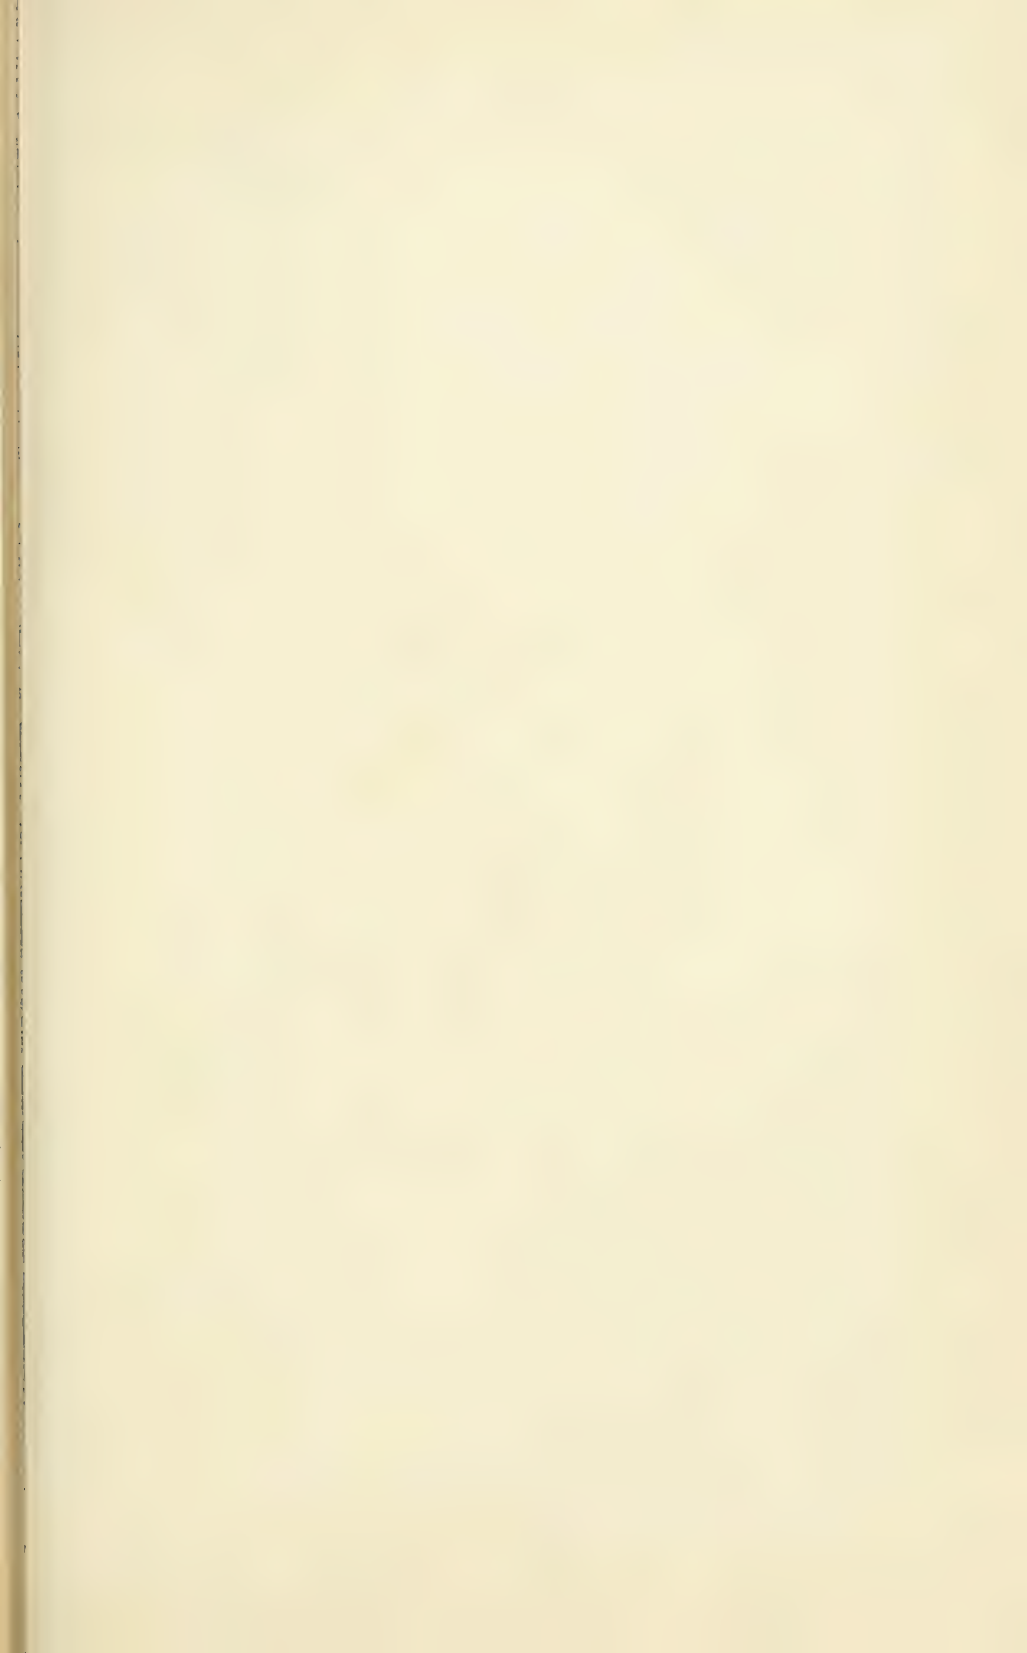

Another evidence of the extreme force of the wind was the fact that many weather vanes were carried away or broken. In some cases the iron rod supporting the vane was bent at an angle by the wind. Maximum velocity of wind in Boston, 72 miles an hour.

The streets of the town were all impassable because of snow and of branches of trees and whole trees blown down across them to an extent never before seen by the writer. The electric-light poles and wires were sadly disarranged. Many poles were prostrated and the wires were in many instances hanging low or trailing on the ground. The snow had frozen on the wires, making them two or three inches in diameter, and their great weight when thus encumbered led to a large share of their disaster.

A very noticeable feature of the storm was its sudden onset and short duration. The afternoon of the 26th (Saturday) was cloudy and somewhat chilly, but not otherwise unpleasant. At 6 P.M. the writer rode a bicycle from Gannett's Corner to Cohasset and was not troubled by wind or any other circumstance. Later in the evening it began to snow. At 10 P.M. two young men rode their bicycles from Warren Bates' boarding house beyond Steep Rocks on Jerusalem Road to their home by Cohasset Common. They said the wind was becoming severe and there were about two inches of slush on the ground, but they were able to ride their wheels. Between then and midnight the storm broke out in all its fury, and houses in the village were shaken and rocked to an unusual degree. High tide occurred at 10.40 A.M. and the main violence and damage of the storm took place before noon on Sunday. It will be seen that the main fury of the storm was confined to a little more than twelve hours — a marked contrast to its predecessor, the Lighthouse storm, which gathered its fury during three days of violent east wind. In our 1898 storm it was feared by many that the night tide would rise still higher and greatly increase the damage, but such did not prove to be the case. The 1898 storm differed from its predecessor in not occurring at high-course tides. The high level to which the water rose was probably due to the force of the east wind in driving the water in. The barometer in the 1898 gale was extremely low, 28.7. The greatest damage to houses along the shore occurred at the Sand Hills in Scituate, at Nantasket Beach and the vicinity of Gun Rock, and at North Scituate Beach. Cohasset summer cottages were too well founded to receive much damage. The injury to beaches and shore roads in Cohasset was considerable, and a somewhat systematic account of the damage done on the Cohasset shore may be of interest.

Beginning near the easterly part of our shore, the most permanent damage was done to Bassing Beach. For many years past this beach has been used by a number of Cohasset men for the purpose of bleaching and drying Irish moss. For the men thus engaged, mossing has furnished a continuous occupation for the summer. The beach before the storm had upon it twenty-two small buildings, most of them being used for the storing of moss, but several served for temporary dwellings of the mossers and two were used as gunning shanties. The storm moved or demolished all these buildings but one, and lowered the beach a good deal, making it less suitable for mossing purposes. The buildings and their debris were stranded along the southerly side of Bailey's Creek, one or two being carried nearly to Border Street. Fortunately all the mossers but two had sold their moss earlier in the fall, so most of the buildings were empty. Two men, Cornelius Murphy and Thomas Dunn, were staying at their shanties on the beach. As the tide rose and surrounded the buildings, each took refuge upon the roof and was carried some distance in that manner. One jumped into a boat which was drifting by and thus reached the shore. The other leaped upon a rock in midstream and was rescued by a man from the shore in a boat. No loss of life occurred in Cohasset on account of this storm and no bodies floated ashore. In Scituate, at the Sand Hills, a woman was drowned while attempting to escape from a cottage, and four young men camping upon an island in North River were drowned. At the culvert on Border Street beyond Government Island the railings on both sides of the street were carried away by floating debris, and the water was about six feet deep over the road. The railings between Gulf bridge and Tower's wharf were also carried away. Tower Brothers' lumber wharf suffered great damage, the lumber stored on their various wharves being floated off, strewn upon Border Street, lodged at different places about Cohasset harbor, and some of it carried under the Gulf bridge and stranded at different points up Gulf River; some of these points being quite distant.

All of Border St. west of Gulf bridge was under water and was made impassable for horses by being thickly strewn with lumber, fence posts, and other debris, which was in places piled three feet high. Several boats, including one sail-boat, were left in the middle of the road. The level of the water against Tower's building, known as the "old sail loft," was  $33\frac{1}{2}$  inches above the street. The high-water line on this and other buildings is beautifully shown on the accompanying photograph which was taken from a point looking east. The buildings, beginning at the left hand, are: the old sail loft, Tower Brothers' store, Tower Brothers' coal shed. Beyond the latter is seen the wreck of the schooner Daylight, to be referred to later. The foundations of the old sail loft were laid in the form of a mainsail, so that sails of that shape could be conveniently laid out upon the floor.

The driveways and open spaces on the wharves were in similar condition to the street, and the buildings and wharves were somewhat damaged. The greater part of Snow Place was under water. Also South Main St. near the Catholic Church, the water over the road in the latter locality being too deep for high rubber boots. The well of Capt. Henry Collier became salt and was unfit for use for a number of weeks. Part of Summer St. between Snow Place and the Cove was under water. The triangular common at the Cove was all under water, as well as all the streets bordering the Cove; all of Margin St. except the hill near its beginning; all of Stockbridge St. except the hill near its further end and all the easterly part of Atlantic Ave. In Tilden's blacksmith shop the water was 16 inches deep over the floor. It was up to the upper surfaces of the window sills of the small house at the corner of Stockbridge and Margin Sts., level with the sills of Walter Spear's house on Stockbridge St. At the head of the Cove the water after rising to the level of the road fell in a cascade into the meadow beyond, destroying sidewalk, retaining wall, and adjacent platforms.

The piling supporting Caleb F. Nichols' store was somewhat damaged and the water rose to the window sills of the building. Mr. Nichols' stock of groceries was not injured at all, owing to his prudent custom of keeping all goods above the level of the counter. At high tide men were traversing the streets about the Cove in rowboats. Many small yachts had been laid up for the winter about the shores of the Cove, some, like the Zulu owned by Mr. William Hanlon, being securely lodged in the meadow adjoining Margin St. All these boats, and others anchored in the Cove, were set adrift and, by colliding with each other and with the shore, suffered serious injury and were landed in very strange places. The Zulu, a large sloop, was left close against the highway between the hook and ladder house and near Caleb F. Nichols' store. This boat was not injured, however.

The Daylight, a schooner of 10.25 gross tonnage, owned by Joseph Jason and used by him in taking out pleasure parties, was anchored in the Cove, but was beached by the storm at the landing just beyond Tower Brothers' coal shed. She had some holes stove in her besides being otherwise damaged and was carried partly into the highway. She was considered a complete wreck, was stripped of her rigging and her hull was sawed up for firewood, April 7, 1899. The condition of her planking and timbers when taken apart showed that she went out of service none too soon for safety. She was built in Bristol, R.I., in 1877.

The water poured through the depression between Atlantic Ave. and Stockbridge St., making an island of all beyond. It also isolated the Lawrence Barrett house, occupied by Mr. C. W. Barron. In Mr. Barron's stable it rose so high about the horses' legs that they had to be removed to a place of safety.

Beyond Bourne's corner the water was level with the tops of the stone walls, and beyond the next corner on Margin St. it floated off long sections of the wooden capping from the walls. In James Sweeney's house at the Cove a large stick of timber passed into a front basement window and passed out through a rear one. The family were taken out of the upper windows and rescued in a boat.

At Sandy Cove the water was very high, reaching far inland, around and between the cottages. It covered Atlantic Ave. quite deeply in front of Nathaniel W. Treat's house and near Mr. Fox's driveway. The seas began to break over the Sandy Cove beach and into the meadow as early as 7.30 A.M., which was three hours before high tide. The water was level with the floor of Rev. James Reed's piazza.

In the Mohawk Valley it poured across the highway, washing away the sides of the road. Roads of this kind are injured in these storms by a double cascade action, being cut down on the landward side while the water is rising. When the tide turns the cascade is in the other direction, cutting down the seaward side and leaving a narrow strip of the road intact in the middle. If the cascade action is sufficiently prolonged, this strip will also disappear, making a complete breach several feet in depth. On Beach St. the tin roof of the L of Mr. James H. Nichols' house was torn off and thrown like a balloon across the street.

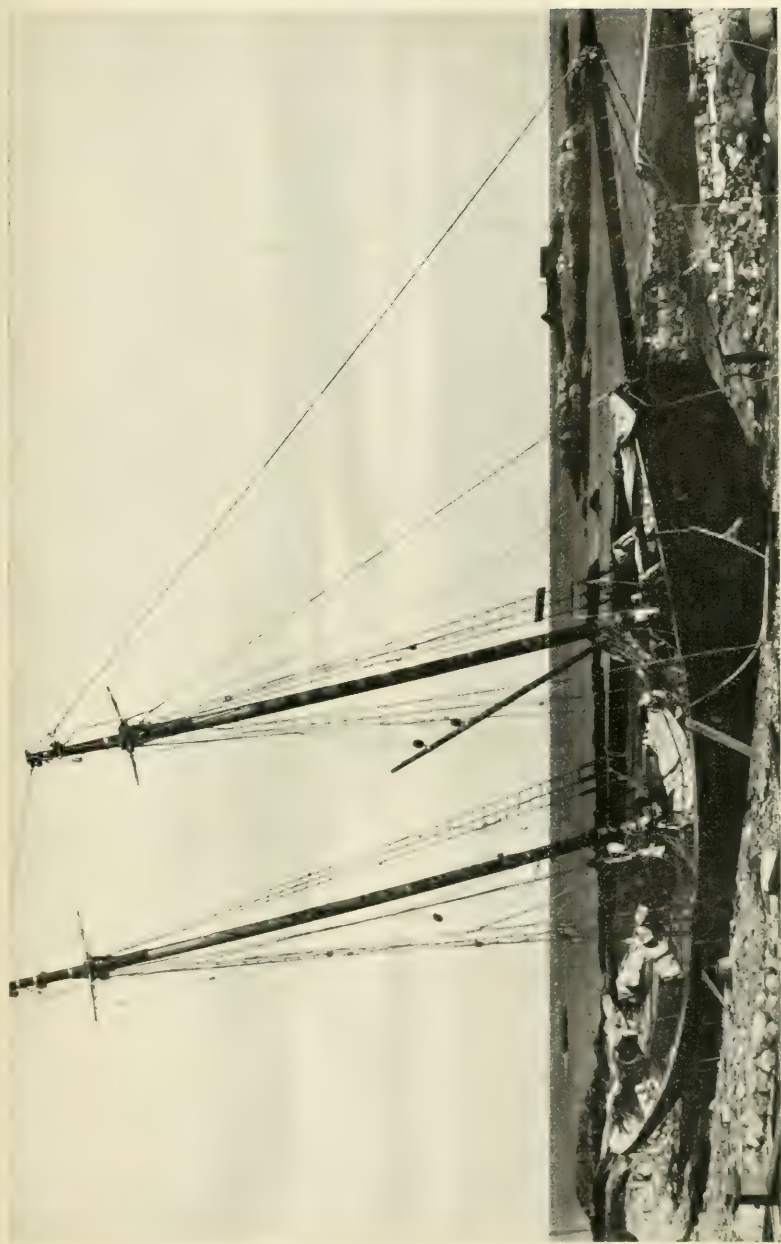

At Cunningham's bridge the water was over the road on both sides of the bridge and covered quite an area of the lawn of Mr. B. Preston Clark with driftwood. One of the most thrilling events of the storm was the wreck of the fishing schooner Juniata at the breakwater, Beach Island, and the miraculous escape of her crew. This vessel had left the "Georges" fishing grounds and was returning to Boston, hastening somewhat to escape the threatening storm.

She was overtaken by the full violence of the gale in the middle of the bay and one sail after another torn to ribbons. She then anchored, but her chains parted under the fearful violence of the sea. Her captain then headed south, hoping to find calmer water in the lee of the ledges. The captain and 17 men all had to take refuge in the rigging. The vessel, after striking on some outlying rocks and later grazing Brush Island, struck plump broadside against the wooden breakwater on Beach Island. The men were able to step off upon the breakwater, but the captain was knocked off the breakwater into the water and was saved only by his vigorous swimming. All were saved and effecting an entrance into Mr. Nicholas Sheldon's cottage nearby, made a fire and got the first warmth and comfort they had had for many hours. The vessel struck the breakwater at about 4.30 A.M., which was the hour of low tide. The facts that she drew 10 feet of water and that she landed on rocks which are perfectly bare at low tide confirm the opinion of Cohasset mariners that during that night the tide did not ebb at all but kept coming in higher and higher under the force of the wind. As the tide rose, the seas lifted the Juniata clean over the breakwater and landed her high up on the beach and close to Mr. Sheldon's piazza. The vessel was of beautiful model, only six months old, 78 tons, 100 ft. over all, 23 ft. beam, and 10 ft. hold. Her captain was Robert M. Corey, who owned one-quarter of her. A full account of the vessel and wreck was written by Rev. E. Victor Bigelow and published in the Boston Herald (evening edition) November 28, 1898. The writer is indebted to this account for the foregoing facts. The accompanying photograph shows the wreck of the Juniata.

The Juniata was sold at public auction early in December to a Mr. Burke of Scituate for $680. A building mover was employed to raise her out of the sand and move her to the lower part of the beach, after which, at 12 noon on Feb. 25, 1899, she was successfully launched into the breakwater, triumphantly passed out through the opening and, in tow of a tug, was taken to Gloucester to be repaired and refitted.

The escape of this vessel and crew is a very marvelous event. Had the vessel struck one hundred feet to one side or the other from the breakwater she would have encountered savage rocks and been dashed to pieces. The breakwater was as safe as a wharf, but it suffered much damage itself and had most of its planking removed from the portion where the vessel struck it.

The sea swept savagely across Sandy Beach, washing away a portion of the highway, especially upon the back side, and covering other portions of the road with three or four feet of beach pebbles. The pranks played with the bath-houses are somewhat interesting. All the latter that were fastened down were either demolished beyond recovery or had their front and back walls completely smashed and were then partly buried in beach stones. Those bath-houses that were not fastened down floated for very considerable distances, often with little or no injury. Many of them reposed among the shrubbery along the shores of Little Harbor or were left insecurely perched like erratic boulders upon projecting ledges of the shore, while a few reached the garden of Mr. Charles S. Bates near the head of the Common, being landed high up, within a few rods of North Main St.

Passing over the bluff occupied by the Kimball property and down the slight hill to the beach, we found the beautiful macadamized road and its high retaining wall on the south side reduced to a state of chaos. The sea had made wide breaches through it, washing it out to the depth of five or six feet, and we found only irregular hillocks of gravel and wastes of beach stones, impassable for all except pedestrians. The Massachusetts Humane Society's boat-house and the old boat-house adjoining it were both canted down from their supports. The new barn and boat-storage house of Mr. Matthew Luce was also undermined and canted. Mr. Luce's club-house, which stands in an exposed situation on the beach, was uninjured, probably owing to its being raised up on posts, with good opportunity for the sea to sweep underneath it. The small one-story house that had for many years stood high up on the beach was moved from its location, turned half-way round, and had some of its walls demolished. It was a complete wreck and was soon taken down.

The house formerly occupied by the late John Roche, which stood upon the southerly side of Atlantic Avenue, was standing during the Lighthouse storm. It was in this house that Mrs. Peter Kimball took refuge during that storm, and she was removed from it in a boat, as the water rose high about it. Although uninjured in that storm it was not so fortunate in this one, as it was moved about fifteen feet off its foundation and turned partly round. Mr. Aldrich, who was in his cottage at the time, said that the Roche house was moved round a number of times and that he could one minute see the front door and the next minute could not. The water rose in the house a foot higher than the window-sills and reached a point 4 ft. 8 in. above the ground. An outbuilding measuring 10 ft. by 14 ft. and used as a woodshed and hen-house was carried by the water to Cat Dam. The Roche house was torn down about the middle of May, 1899. Thus perished an old landmark of the shore and the former abode of two very estimable people. Its foundation stones have been gathered into a cairn upon which nasturtiums gracefully climb.

The highway in the vicinity of the Roche house was covered by a bank of sand about five feet deep. At Pleasant Beach we saw abundant signs of the storm's havoc with the shipping, for the beach presented the appearance of a large lumber yard. Ship timbers of all sizes were strewn in profusion, most of them being of clean hard pine, showing that fine new vessels were unable to cope with the storm's fury. These big sticks were soon appropriated by our citizens, and some of them were used to build a breakwater at Pleasant Beach. The volume of water and wreckage pouring over Cat Dam broke down both railings and damaged the road. The causeway near Steep Rocks had the tide to the tops of the fences, and it reached the level of the sill of the house owned by Mr. Edward Wheelwright, and occupied by his coachman, James Sweeney, at the foot of Steep Rocks.

Piazzas of the cottages of Hon. H. H. Coolidge and William Faxon, Jr., were destroyed. A chimney was blown over on the house of Matthew Luce, and the cottage of G. D. Braman had its tin roof blown off. The stable of the Pitkin cottage was undermined and canted down toward the sea. A small stone building on the small valley beach near the Black Rock House had its roof partly detached by force of wind and wave. The rear piazzas of the Black Rock House were damaged.

The beach extending from Jerusalem Road to Green Hill suffered a breach of about 75 feet in width. It was covered with all kinds of wreckage and encumbered with the masts, keel, and several large portions of the hull of a coal barge that was wrecked on Black Rock. One of the masts now forms the lower section of Mr. Thomas W. Lawson's flagstaff at the John Bryant place. This coal barge, after striking on Black Rock, careened, so that the mast rested on the island. The crew climbed to the island by following the mast and were brought ashore by the Hull Life-Saving Crew. Many coal barges are said to have foundered in Massachusetts Bay during this storm, and the masts of two unknown schooners were found sticking up near the entrance of Cohasset harbor.

A great deal of wreckage was swept into Straits Pond, covering the ice for large areas, and lodged along its shores. A small one-story building was carried to the further end of Straits Pond and remained standing in the water near Nantasket post office for some time until it was burned.

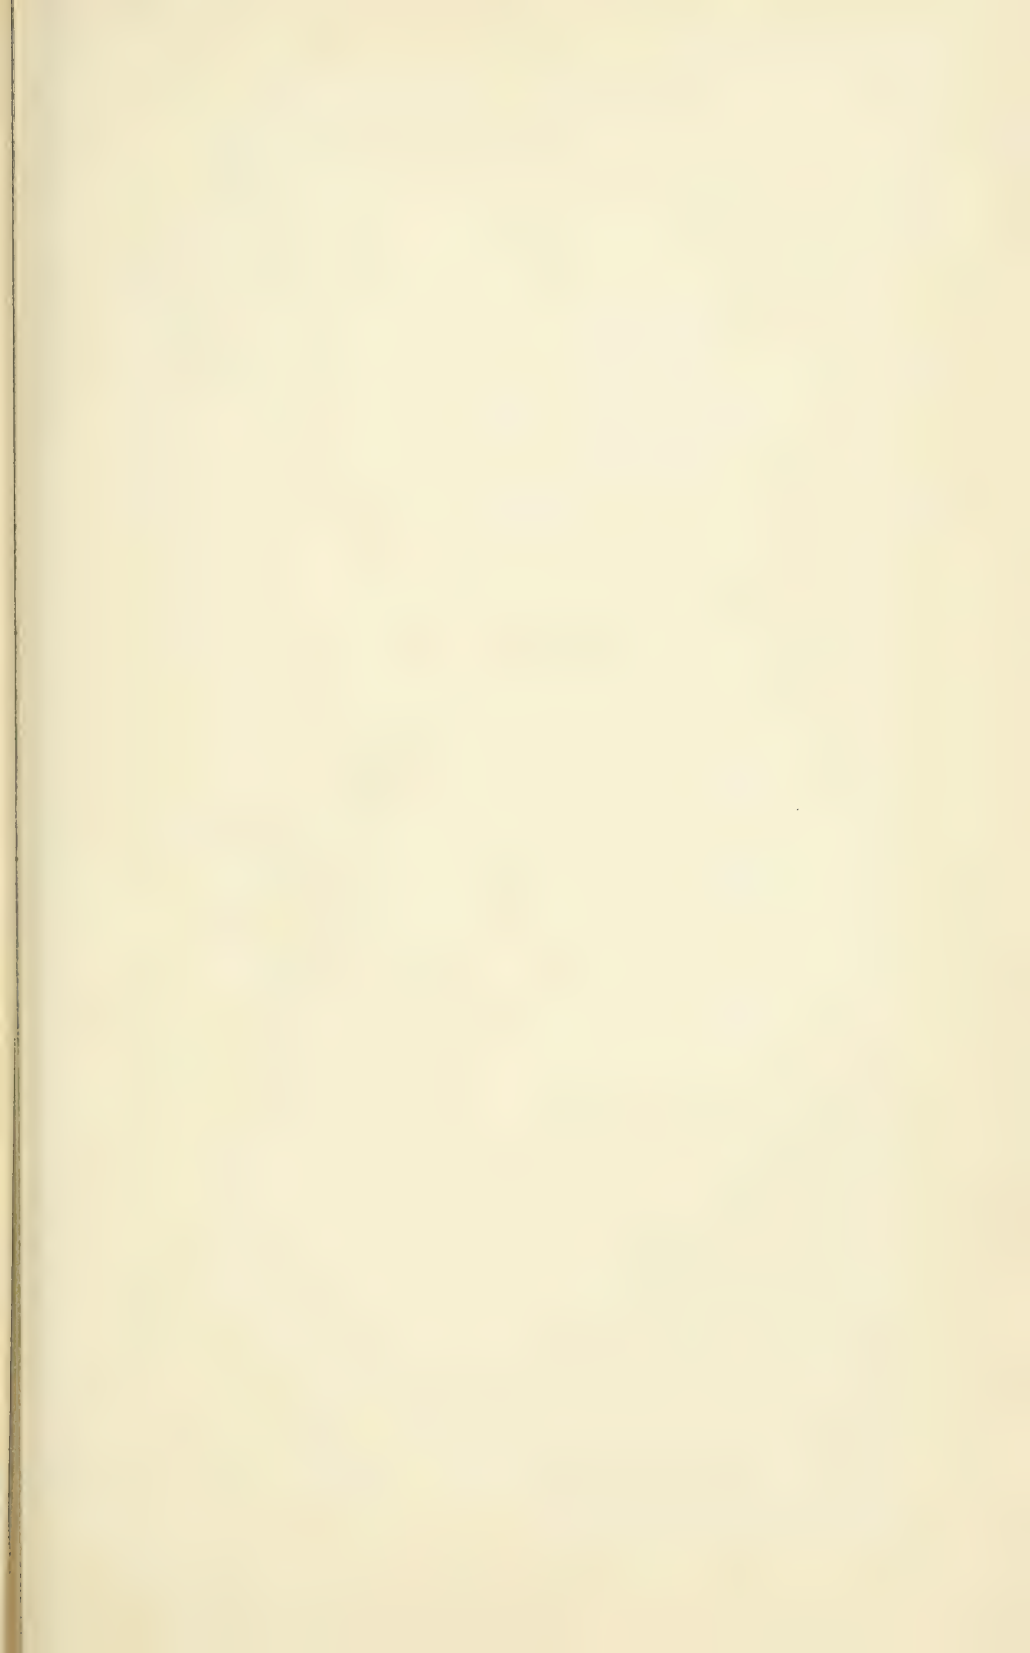

All our beaches were made more steep, much of the material being carried over to the back side, leaving the beaches less able to cope with future storms and less able to protect the roads they bear. Undoubtedly the storms of a century have robbed Cohasset of some land area. Mr. James Pettee informed me that many years ago he cultivated a good-sized vegetable garden back of the Black Rock House, between it and the sea. He also said that on the northerly side of Jerusalem Road, between the Black Rock House and the beach leading to Groen Hill, there was a field which produced hay and which was large enough for a hay wagon to turn round upon without difficulty. The condition of the latter place is now such that one more great storm might easily destroy a portion of the highway. (These references to the Black Rock House relate to the old hotel which formerly stood close to Jerusalem Road a little east of its intersection with Forest Ave.)

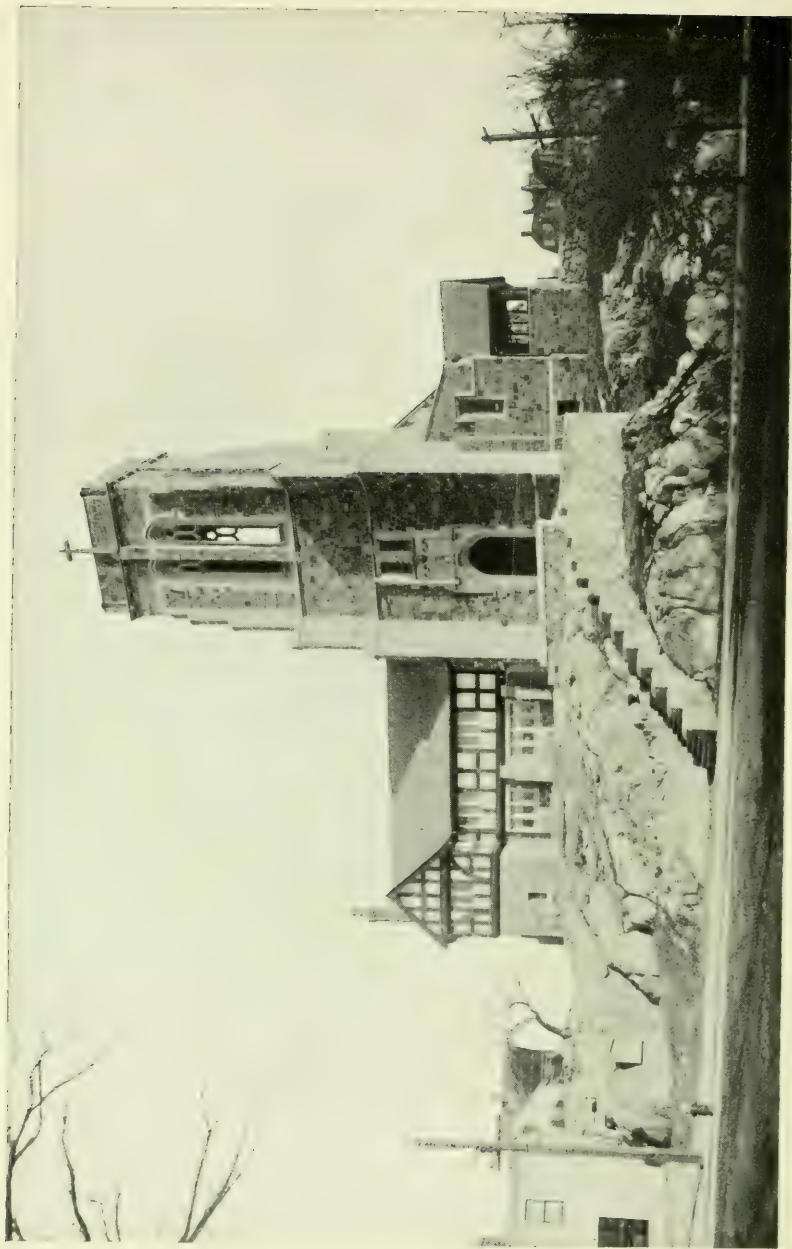

The winter of 1898-9 was also remarkable for a great snow storm. Snow had been falling pretty steadily for two days, when, on the 13th of February, the storm redoubled in fury and the rate of snowfall greatly increased. The result when the sky cleared on the morning of the 14th was that every road in town was blocked; so much so that all the streets in the center of the town had to be shoveled out by hand. Three places in town showed by measurement drifts eight feet deep, viz.: Sohier's hill, Sohier St. near top of Deer Hill, and Jerusalem Road near Mr. Wadleigh's cottage. It was nearly noon on Feb. 15, thirty-six hours after the storm cleared off, before a sleigh could pass from Depot Court to the North End at junction of Jerusalem Road. The railroad was impassable from Monday noon until 7 P.M. Tuesday. The snow was so deep on a level that a man residing by Cohasset Common tried to drive out in his sleigh, but in attempting to cross the Common, back of the Unitarian Church, got so badly stuck that he had to back out and return home. The oldest residents said they had never seen the roads more encumbered with snow, and the great storm of 1867 is probably the only recent one with which this of February, 1899, could be compared. The beach leading to Green Hill was covered with ice five to eight feet in thickness. This fact together with the frozen condition of the beach itself undoubtedly prevented further ravages by the sea.

The winter of 1903-4 was notable for its long term of continuous sleighing. It began to snow on the day after Christmas, and it was good sleighing on all the roads until Town Meeting Day (March 7), a period of ten weeks. Such winters are now common in the inland and northern portions of New England, and are said to have been common here in "old times," but it seems that the one just mentioned is the only one of the kind experienced in Cohasset for thirty or forty years.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH.

A SHORT HISTORY OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH.

By REV. HOWARD KEY BARTOW.

THE parish of St. Stephen's began with the first service held in The Grand Army Hall June 4, 1893. From this venture there have resulted the thriving congregation and the gothic stone church which crowns the rocks in the center of the town.

The first rector, or as he preferred to be called, preacher, was the Rev. Charles Ferguson, who assumed charge of the parish April 26, 1893, and after two years he was succeeded in 1895, by the Rev. J. B. Thomas who ministered to the parish until 1898. A short period, less than a year, elapsed between his leaving and the calling of a new rector. This time was covered by the Rev. James Woods, who acted as locum tenens until the arrival of the Rev. Milo H. Gates, who resigned the parish at Ipswich to become rector June 1, 1898. The active history of the parish begins with Mr. Gates, for through his efforts the parish life was centered in the beautiful gothic church, with its modern parish house.

The corner stone was laid by Bishop Lawrence, Friday, December 8, 1899, in the presence of the rector, vestry, visiting clergy, and townspeople. Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson of Boston, were the architects. Following the perpendicular gothic style, they created a dignified, stately edifice, and their design was splendidly carried out by the contractors, L. D. Willcutt & Son. The workmen were almost all Cohasset men. The church was consecrated in June, 1900, by Bishop Lawrence, with the tower of the church uncompleted.

Mr. Gates left Cohasset January 1, 1904, to assume the rectorship of a New York City church, after he had completed the building of the parish house, which was a memorial gift, and he was succeeded by the Rev. H. K. Bartow, the present rector, February 14, 1904. The tower of the church was begun January, 1906, and dedicated by the bishop September 30, 1906. This, like the church building proper, was the result of general subscription among the congregation.

The seven memorial stained glass windows in the church are the work of Mr. Harry E. Goodhue of Cambridge, and were given in memory of various persons, — a vestryman, a choir boy, one of the laborers on the church, and relatives of members of the congregation.

Several gifts made to the church are of interest as being historical. The alms bason the gift of Mrs. Thomas Richardson, is very old and came from Italy; the shaft of the baptismal font was given through Mr. Gates, by the rector, the Rev. A. C. W. Upcher, and parish of St. Andrew's Church, Hingham, England, and was the original font of that ancient parish. It is badly marred, and is supposed to have been broken by the soldiers of Cromwell when so many churches in England were despoiled. The font has been restored practically as it was originally. The ancestors of Abraham Lincoln, as well as of all the early settlers of this town and Hingham, were baptized in the font of which this shaft was a part. The corner stone of the church was the doorstep of the old center schoolhouse, which afterwards became the Grand Army Hall, where the first services of this church were held. This doorstep was used for those associations and because the grandfather of the contractor, Mr. L. D. Willcutt, labored on the construction of the original building. The two alms boxes, on either side of the entrance under the tower, are both very old. That on the left was an original alms box and came from Nuremberg; the other has been converted to the present use from an old "strong" box brought from the Continent, and is the gift of Mr. E. B. Townsend.

POPE MEMORIAL CHURCH.

THE POPE MEMORIAL CHURCH.

By REV. CECIL HARPER.

THE Pope Memorial Church was built in 1890 as a memorial to Charles Linder Pope, who died April 21, 1898, in the seventeenth year of his age.

The church, erected by his parents Colonel and Mrs. Albert A. Pope, is situated at the opening of Jerusalem Road, near West's Corner, fronted by a broad lawn and looking up Strait's Pond toward the Black Rock. It is built in gothic style, of seam-faced Quincy granite, trimmed with gray, and roofed with red tile. It has a large open tower, containing a rich tenor bell. The seating capacity of the church is about two hundred and forty, and of the vestry sixty. The walls are tinted green, and the ceiling a cream, with exposed rafters. The church contains a finely voiced pipe organ. Music is made a feature of the service, and many distinguished vocalists are heard each year.

The church is undenominational, and has no creed. Its mission is to deepen the spirit of universal brotherhood, and over the organ in letters of gold is inscribed the text

"LOVE TO GOD: LOVE TO MAN."

It is attended by persons of all denominations — in the summer by cottagers and guests at the various hotels; in the winter by the permanent residents.

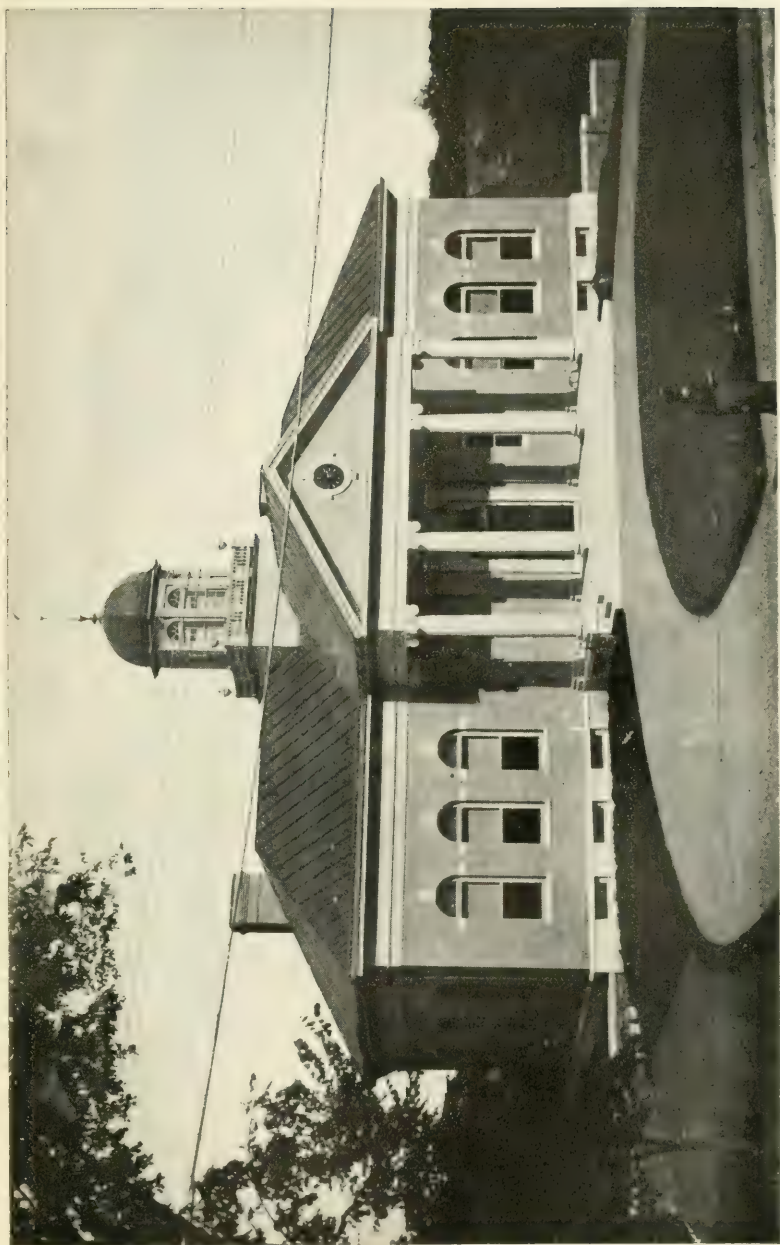

The pastor, Rev. Cecil Harper, has been in charge from the beginning. There is a prosperous Sunday school connected with the church. It is supported by voluntary contributions and by an annual fair.

THE PAUL PRATT MEMORIAL LIBRARY.

By REV. WILLIAM R. COLE.

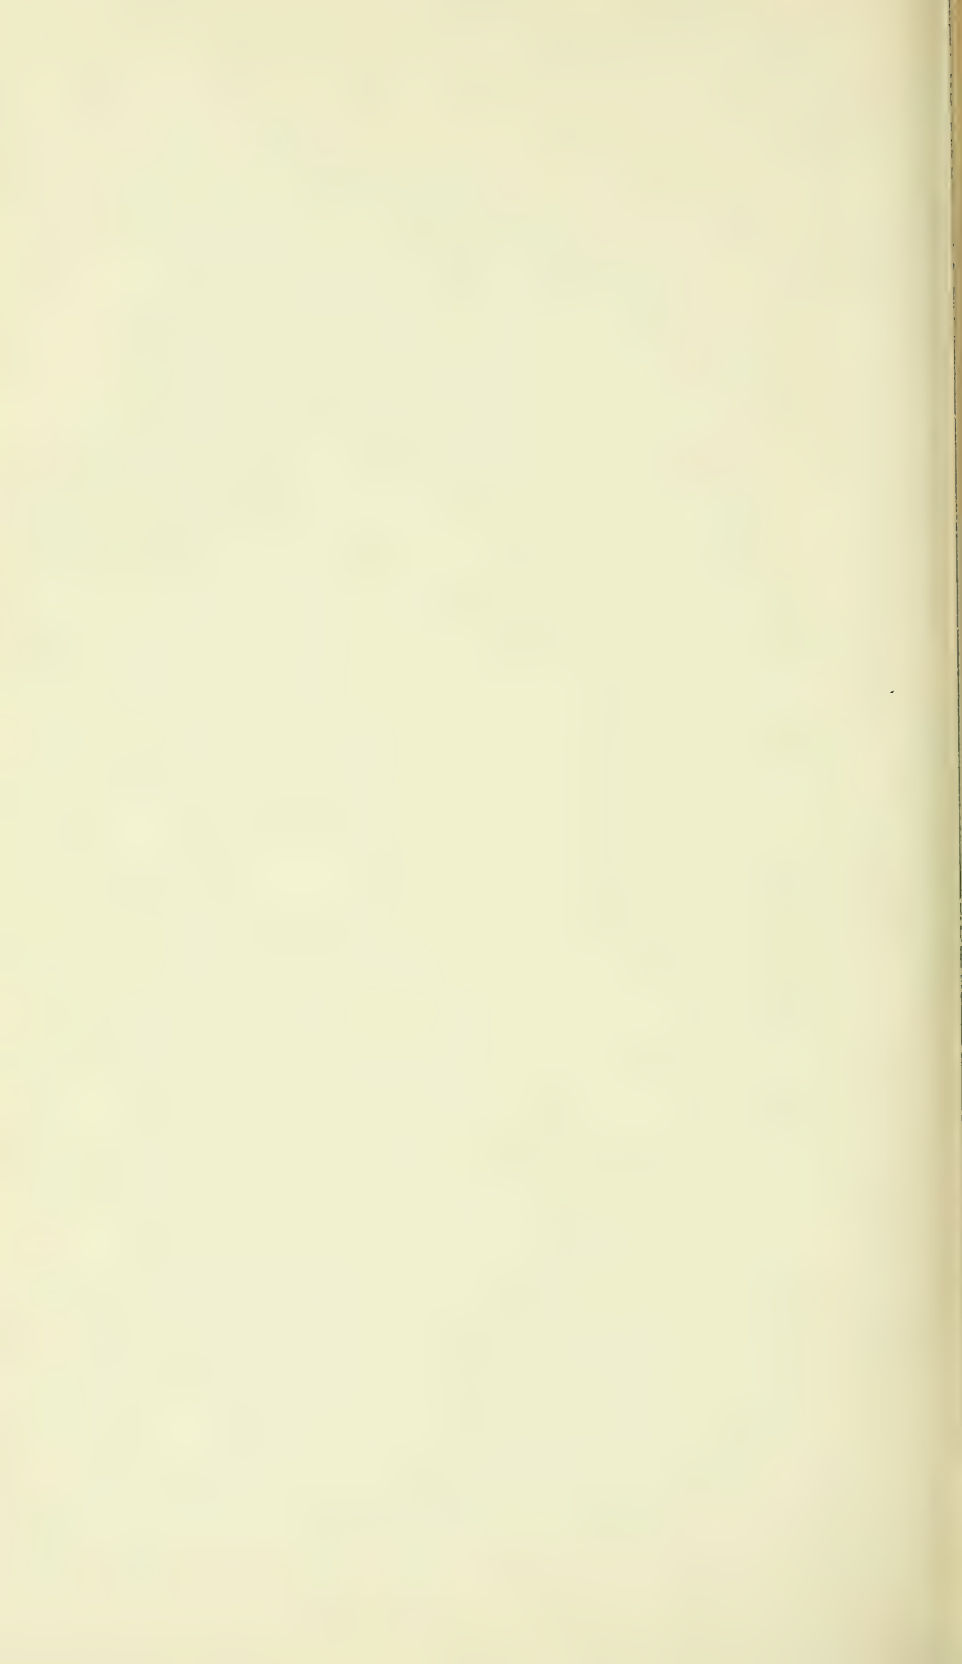

IN the Narrative History of Cohasset, by the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, there is to be found (pp. 518 to 522) the story of how the library began as an institution and its development into a public library of the town, in the year 1879, as the Cohasset Free Public Library. Within twenty years from that date, it had become apparent that the quarters it occupied on the first floor of the Town Hall were inadequate and outgrown. Fortunately the need of the library and the hopes of its friends were answered by the bequest of Miss Harriot Eustis Pratt.

Miss Harriot Eustis Pratt was the daughter of Paul Pratt, who was born in Cohasset May 17, 1788, and died in Cohasset August 31, 1853. At his death he left a modest fortune to his daughters, Sarah S. and Harriot E., which, through wise management and shrewd investment by their trustees and the simple, careful living of the sisters, increased materially. The sisters had from the start been interested and active in the library work. Miss Sarah was one of the original trustees of the Cohasset Free Public Library and continued in that office until her death in 1896. Miss Harriot died April 19, 1898, and her will, probated May 18, 1898, founded the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Her will directed that one-half of her estate, not including certain real estate amounting to a little more than forty thousand dollars, should be paid over to the chairman of the Selectmen of Cohasset, to the pastor of the First Parish Church in Cohasset and to the pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset for the time being; and to Randolph Knapp and James Longley and to two others to be chosen by these five, who should constitute a board of trustees for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a public library in the town of Cohasset to be known as the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The will also directed that the three officials should always be members, ex officio, of the Board of Trustees; that this board should make reasonable regulations for the establishment and maintenance of the library by incorporation or otherwise, and provide for the perpetual care thereof; and that the largest possible liberty and discretion in the use of such literary and social means as should tend to the accomplishment of the purpose of the bequest, be conferred upon them and their successors in the trust. Aside from the ex officio members any vacancy which arises in the board is to be filled by the vote of the remaining members.

Owing to the claim of an adopted niece and consequent litigation, there intervened a delay of nearly two years before the trustees could organize.

The first meeting of the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library was held in the Selectmen's room in the Town Hall, February 3, 1900. In accordance with the authority granted to them, Philander Bates, chairman of the Selectmen of Cohasset, William R. Cole, pastor of the First Parish Church in Cohasset, E. Victor Bigelow, pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, and James Longley of Boston, chose Samuel T. Snow of Cohasset in the place of Randolph Knapp, deceased, and these five chose Charles A. Welch and Abraham H. Tower, both of Cohasset.

The board organized with the following officers: President, Samuel T. Snow; Treasurer, James Longley; and Clerk, William R. Cole. In the following month they organized under the laws of the state as a corporation; the trustees became directors and the same officers were elected. There have been changes in the board occasioned by the change of pastors in the Second Congregational Church, Rev. Charles W. Merriam taking the place of Rev. E. V. Bigelow in 1901 and the Rev. F. B. McAllister that of Mr. Merriam in 1904; and by the deaths of Samuel T. Snow in 1901, of Abraham H. Tower in 1904 and of Charles A. Welch in 1908, whose places were filled in order by Charles C. Wheelwright, Edward Nichols and George W. Collier, all of Cohasset.

The first business the board found under the bequest awaiting them, was the location and erection of a building. The beginning of this task was made possible by the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Snow of the piece of land on South Main Street where the library now stands. Mr. Edward Nichols was selected as the architect, and the construction of the building was begun in April, 1902, and finished in December of the same year. As the building approached completion, the question of bringing the two libraries, the Cohasset Free Public Library and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, into coöperation and union, pressed more and more upon the attention and thought of the trustees and the townspeople. The directors of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library were restrained by the terms of the trust from surrendering the position of regulating and supervising everything in the library, but there was the town library with its trustees and books. Good sense, business economy and destiny demanded that the two should be as one. It was simply brought about. The two boards agreed between themselves to an arrangement, whereby the two libraries could work together without friction and with the common purpose of giving to the people of Cohasset, the best possible collection of books with large liberty of use, in a comfortable building modernly equipped. The agreement was presented to the Town Meeting, March, 1903, and met with the approval of the citizens. Its duration was for the term of three years and has since been renewed for a like length of time. By this agreement, the directors of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library have exclusive control of the management of the library, their own funds and the town appropriation. The trustees of the Cohasset Free Public Library have entire control of the funds of that library and the interest from the same. All books bought from their funds and from the town appropriation are marked with the name of the Cohasset Free Public Library. The two boards are represented on the book committee, and thus all books are purchased with the joint voice and authority of the two boards.

Another important matter in the library's history was effected by the directors. It was the remodeling of the library after the best types of such institutions, a complete change in method of cataloguing of books and the making of regulations for the greatest freedom to the borrowers possible under a wise control.

All these problems were met and solved, and the library was opened to the public on July 13, 1903, with certain simple dedicatory exercises.

The five years of joint history of the libraries have been years of steady improvement and growth. Many improvements in the way of the public's comfort in the building and its use of the books have been made.

For the children, a department has been made in the north room, where their books are stacked, their periodicals gathered and their own tables and chairs arranged for their use.

The number of books has in these five years been nearly doubled, and those who use the library have greatly increased in number since the days of the badly ventilated and lighted room in the Town Hall.

To each of the libraries bequests or gifts have been made: under the wills of Miss Susannah L. Stoddard and Mrs. Henry M. Knowles, the Cohasset Free Public Library; by that of Mrs. Edward Wheelwright, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library became beneficiaries. At the time of the opening of the library, Mr. Charles A. Welch, one of the directors, gave three thousand dollars to be used for the purchase of books for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. It was a most opportune gift, as it enabled the management to strengthen the library in many weak places.

In bringing the story of the library up to date (1908) a just pride may be taken in the interest and labor of all who first undertook the work and in the excellent result achieved by the money, the thought and devotion of the people of Cohasset. Its future as an institution is assured among us. Its power as an effective agent for good should be as great as is its opportunity.

DESCRIPTION OF BUILDING BY THE ARCHITECT,
EDWARD NICHOLS.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library building is designed in the classical style of architecture, of the Georgian, or Colonial period, and is cruciform in plan, the main reading rooms making the long arms of the cross, with an Ionic portico on the front and the stack room in the rear making the short arms. The walls are built of buff brick with trimmings of Indiana limestone, above a base course of granite. The roof is of copper, and is crowned by an octagonal cupola terminated by a vane in the form of a mackerel, — typical of Cohasset's former industry. In a circular hall opposite the entrance is the general delivery desk, and close to this a card catalogue case let into the paneling of the wall. Beyond the desk, with an intervening lobby, is the book room, consisting of two tiers of steel stacks with glass floor. This room is of fireproof construction, and is shut off from the main building by an automatic fireproof door. It contains shelf-room for about 13,000 volumes, and, by reason of the basement being wholly above ground on the rear, it is made possible to increase the capacity by adding an equal amount of shelving below, making a total capacity of 26,000 volumes. This arrangement of stacks, partly above and partly below the general delivery desk, brings all of the books within easy access. The whole north wing of the building is given to a large reading room containing the juvenile department and cases for exhibition of articles of historic interest; and the south wing is divided into a smaller reading room, an alcove for reference books, and a room for the use of the librarian and directors. Both reading rooms have fireplaces, and are paneled to the height of the windows and finished with birch in mahogany color, with birch floors. The spaces on either side of the vestibule are used for the janitor's room and stairs to the basement and loft. In the pediment above the front portico is a clock, the gift of Mr. James Longley of the Board of Directors.

EARLY RECORDS OF THE COHASSET LIBRARY.

SINCE the story of the development of the Cohasset Library was written by Rev. Mr. Bigelow, as mentioned above, books bearing the inscription, "Social Library of Cohasset, 1792," have been found among those of the Cohasset Free Public Library. These books show that a Social Library was in existence at least forty years earlier than the Washington Library, which was legally organized in 1832.

A document dated March, 1800, now in possession of the library, a copy of which is appended hereto, gives a "List of Proprietors of old stock on the first of march by the Records" of the Cohasset Social Library, presumably that one in existence in 1792 and likely the Social Library into which the Washington Library was merged in 1844.

HISTORIC MEMORIALS.

BY OLIVER H. HOWE.

The past ten years have seen a rather general movement to mark historic localities. An interesting memorial is the tablet inserted in a boulder near Bound Rock, close by Lincoln's Mill Pond. The boulder rests against the town boundary stone by the roadside of South Main Street, at the Scituate line.

Bound Rock at the outlet of Lincoln's Mill Pond is underneath a storehouse of the grain mill upon the side street, and is marked by a stone post projecting up through the floor of the building. Bound Rock marks the easterly extremity of the boundary between the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies. Further west the line was designated as passing through the middle of Accord Pond. (See "Narrative History of Cohasset," pp. 124-126.)

This line as it exists on our maps to-day, and referred to as the "Old Colony Line," "Patent Line" or "Patten Line," extends in an approximately straight course from Bound Rock to the Rhode Island boundary, a distance of thirty-five miles. It is the longest straight boundary line in Massachusetts, and originally marked the division between Puritans on the north and Pilgrims on the south. It now divides Norfolk and Plymouth counties, with the exception that Hingham on its northerly side has joined Plymouth county.

Established in 1640 by four eminent men from the two colonies, it is found that with one exception it is the earliest artificial boundary located by landmarks in the United States. A line extending twelve miles across the peninsula from Chesapeake Bay to the ocean was established in 1632 and remains as a present boundary between Maryland and Virginia. The latter line was designated in a charter from the king, while the Massachusetts colony line was a mutual arrangement between the two colonies by their own appointed commissioners.

The tablet was prepared and placed by the Old Colony Commission, appointed by the governor in 1895, and consisting of William T. Davis of Plymouth, Rev. S. Hopkins Emery of Taunton, and L. Vernon Briggs of Boston. It was erected in 1900 at the most convenient point on the main highway, although 133 feet distant from Bound Rock. The tablet reads as follows:

Another boulder with tablet was erected by the Col. Thomas Lothrop Chapter, D. A. R., from proceeds of a historical loan exhibition held in the Town Hall in September, 1901. This boulder is placed next North Main Street at the northerly end of the Common, and reads as follows:

RECENT DEVELOPMENT OF COHASSET.

By OLIVER H. HOWE.

THE ten years since the publication of the Narrative History of Cohasset reveal a steady progress along the lines of town life which then existed. We notice at once that Cohasset has become more modern. Perhaps nothing has contributed more to this progressive spirit than the introduction of the telephone. At first limited to a single pay-station in the drug store of Frank W. Browne, Cohasset now has a well-appointed telephone exchange and about two hundred subscribers among townspeople, besides more than one hundred among summer residents.

The citizen no longer spends half a day in driving to see some one on business, only to find him absent from home. As additional bonds of public safety, the town installed a fire alarm telegraph system in the summer of 1905 and a police signal system in 1908. The railroad extended its second track to Cohasset in 1906, adding much to the safety and expedition of trains. Electric power was used from July 24, 1899, to Nov. 22, 1901, as an experiment upon the accommodation trains between Braintree and Cohasset. It had been used for several years previously in the summer upon the trains of open cars of the Nantasket Beach branch; but the line from Braintree to Cohasset was an early instance of its use upon a regularly equipped railroad the year round. The current was supplied by a third rail and the motor was installed beneath an ordinary passenger car, the motorman occupying a small compartment forward.

The introduction of gasoline power for boats has revolutionized the life of the boatman and fisherman. Instead of being dependent upon the fitful and uncertain breeze and being doomed to the consequent becalmed conditions with the weary pull at the oars, against wind and tide, the lobsterman can now visit his traps with certainty and dispatch. The sea is not the only locality vanquished in these modern days, for the horse is becoming less frequent and the automobile is an almost constant feature of the landscape. Roads have been much improved, and the state road now extends from the Hingham line near Whitney crossing to the Scituate line near Lincoln's mill, with the exception of a mile in the village, which the town has made equal to state highway. The increased wear of the roads by automobiles has necessitated the use of oil or of tar to lay dust and preserve the road.

A hearing upon a petition for an electric street railway was held in 1904, but proved futile. The town is thus free from the encumbrances of tracks and trolley wires in its streets, which are none too wide for the present kinds of traffic. What the future means of public transportation will be, one can only conjecture, but it is not unlikely that we shall have motor vehicles running without tracks.

Lovers of horses have preserved for themselves certain secluded drives. Howe's road extending between King and Doane streets has long been enjoyed for driving, but in recent years Worrick road and certain intersecting drives connecting with these and with Turkey Hill have been built and form delightful retreats for summer afternoons.

The general aspect of Cohasset has been much improved by the erection of several public buildings. St. Stephen's Church crowning the rocks in the center of the town, lifts its massive tower as a noble and dignified landmark. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is a conspicuous ornament, and its hospitable doors invite all the inhabitants to the broad and liberal culture of the age. At North Cohasset the Pope Memorial Church, massive in every detail, adds a note of strength and permanence to the already charming Jerusalem Road, while its sweet-toned bell is a delight to every listener.

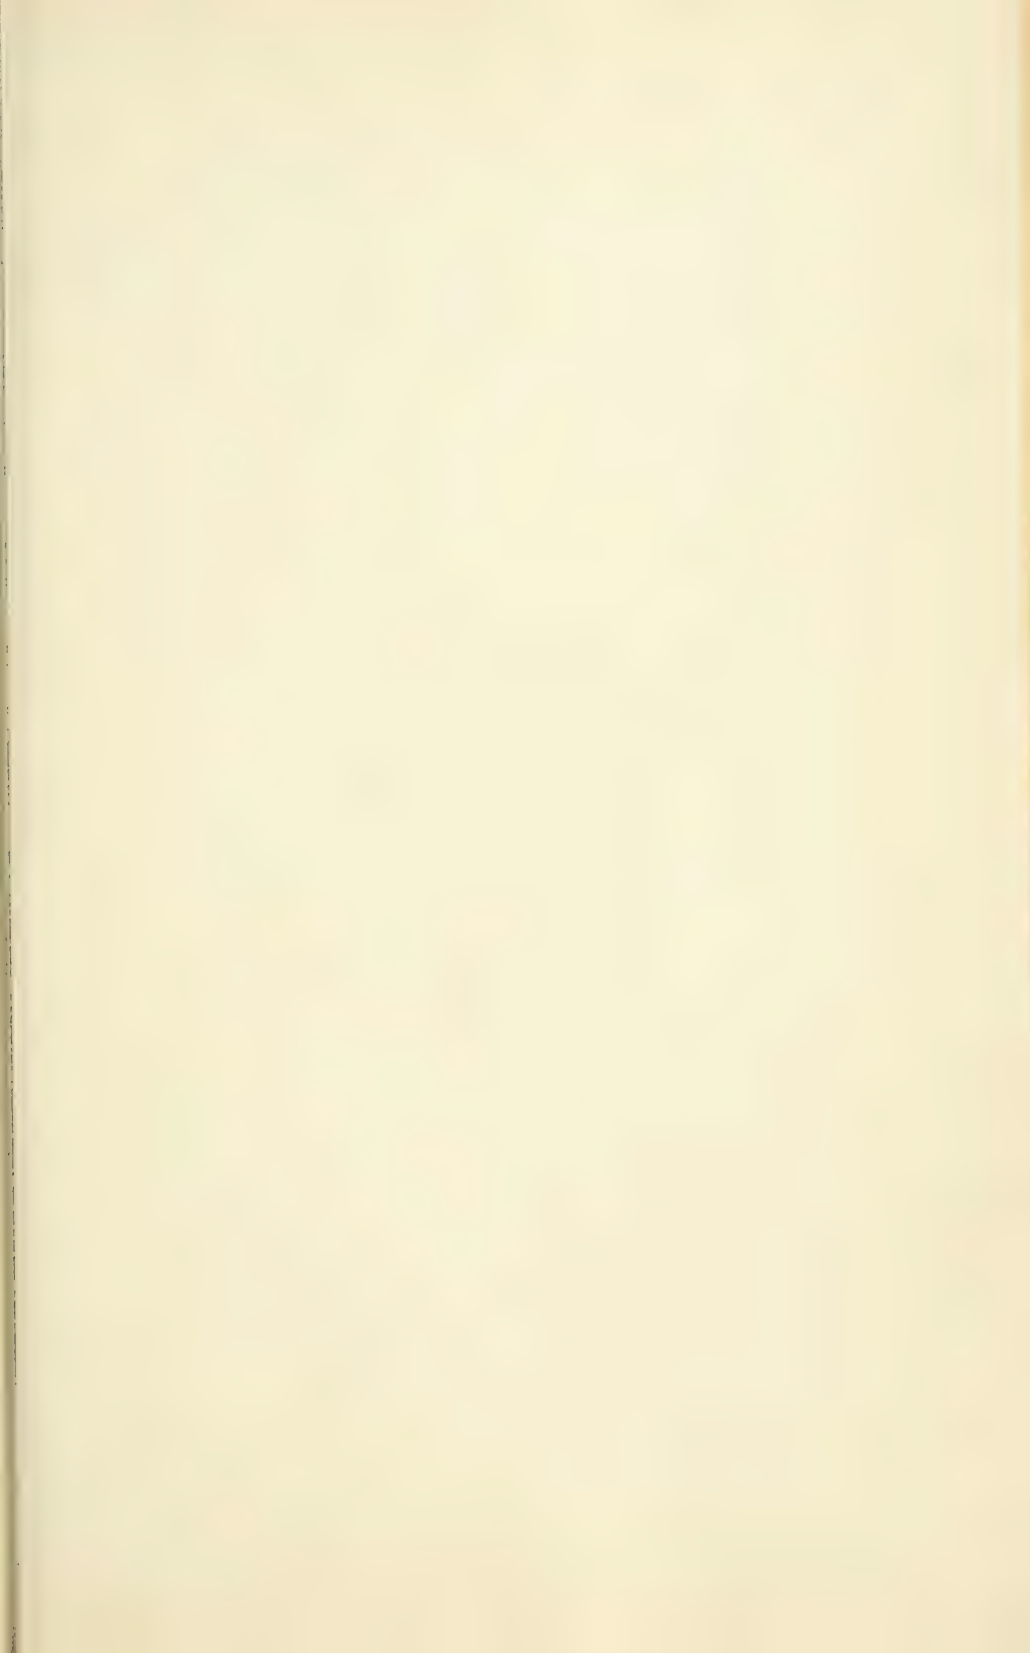

The old Black Rock House, which stood close to Jerusalem Road for so many years, was torn down in the fall of 1903 and its site left open as it is now, greatly enhancing the view. Its new namesake stands upon a rugged cliff about a thousand feet to the westward; and with picturesque towers and breezy piazzas, exults in its cool situation and fine view. With the passing of the old hotel, we must also notice the disappearance of the old Warren

Bates House on Jerusalem Road, for so many years kept as a quiet and select boarding house by the genial couple who occupied it. The property was purchased in 1904 by Mr. Matthew Luce, who, after removing the old buildings, erected the fine residence which he now occupies. Much of the life and constitution of our present summer colony owes its origin to this excellent boarding house where many of our families first enjoyed the delights of Cohasset. Beginning as transient boarders, they were led to build houses and develop large estates here, which have already been enjoyed by the second and third generations of their descendants. It is proverbial that any one who has really tasted the beauties of Cohasset becomes possessed by a desire to return and live here. This is seen in the "homing instinct" of our townspeople; for many a young couple have emigrated to some other locality more convenient to business, expecting never to return; but a few years (or months) have sufficed to bring them back to their native town for life.

Development of ornamental public grounds has kept pace with other improvements. The North End Park, with its quiet, restful elms, was made in 1904 through the generosity of Mrs. T. F. Furber. An extensive improvement of Meeting House pond was accomplished in 1903, the cost being provided by the estate of Robert C. Billings. The fountain and the present graceful curbing were added and the immediate surroundings greatly improved. The beauty of our Common compels the admiration of every beholder. As the center of a village it possesses a harmony and proportion and a rare beauty, which are seldom equalled and probably never surpassed. The Billings estate also provided for an enlargement of Pratt Park in Beechwood, now known as Billings-Pratt Park.

In 1907 the town purchased Lawrence wharf on Border Street for a public landing place. The acquisition of this wharf, together with the widening of Summer Street at the head of the Cove, gives the town the ownership of nearly half of the shore of the inner harbor. Among the old buildings which have given way to the march of improvement were the old store of Mr. Caleb F. Nichols, at the head of the Cove, torn down in 1907, and the near-by Zealous Bates house, demolished in 1908. The aspect of the old fishing village is slowly but surely disappearing, with consequent loss of many quaint buildings, but delightful views have been opened up and the natural beauty is much enhanced.

The schooner yacht Gracie, one of the later vessels built in Cohasset and which remained at anchor in the harbor for nearly twenty years, was broken up in 1905. She was built for Mr. Edward E. Tower in 1872 of timber grown here. Her length was 68.2 feet and her gross tonnage 53.84. A near neighbor of the Gracie at her anchorage, although kept in commission, was the famous sloop yacht Shadow, owned by Dr. John Bryant. She was built by J. B. Herreshoff in 1871 and had a length of 36 feet 6 inches. She defeated the English cutter Madge in 1881, and in the period between 1875 and 1886 the Shadow maintained constant prestige over boats of her tonnage in Eastern waters. Within the past year, when laid up between the bridges at Chelsea, she was burned in the great Chelsea fire April 12, 1908.

Mention of the Shadow brings to mind Capt. Aubrey Crocker, who for many years sailed her. Captain Crocker also sailed the Puritan against the Genesta in 1885, successfully defending the America's cup. In 1893 he sailed the Navahoe against the Britannia on a course from the Isle of Wight to Cherbourg and return, winning back to American possession the Brenton Reef cup. During this race, which was in the severest racing weather, Captain Crocker remained constantly at the wheel for ten hours, part of which time he was in water up to his waist. Captain Crocker spent most of his life in Cohasset and died here June 23, 1906.

An attempt was made in 1902 to have the town purchase White Head, in order to secure to posterity the time-honored picnic privileges. After two meetings and free discussion of the matter, the town voted by a good majority to purchase the property, but failed to give the required two-thirds vote. White Head has since passed into private hands, and the opportunity is lost.

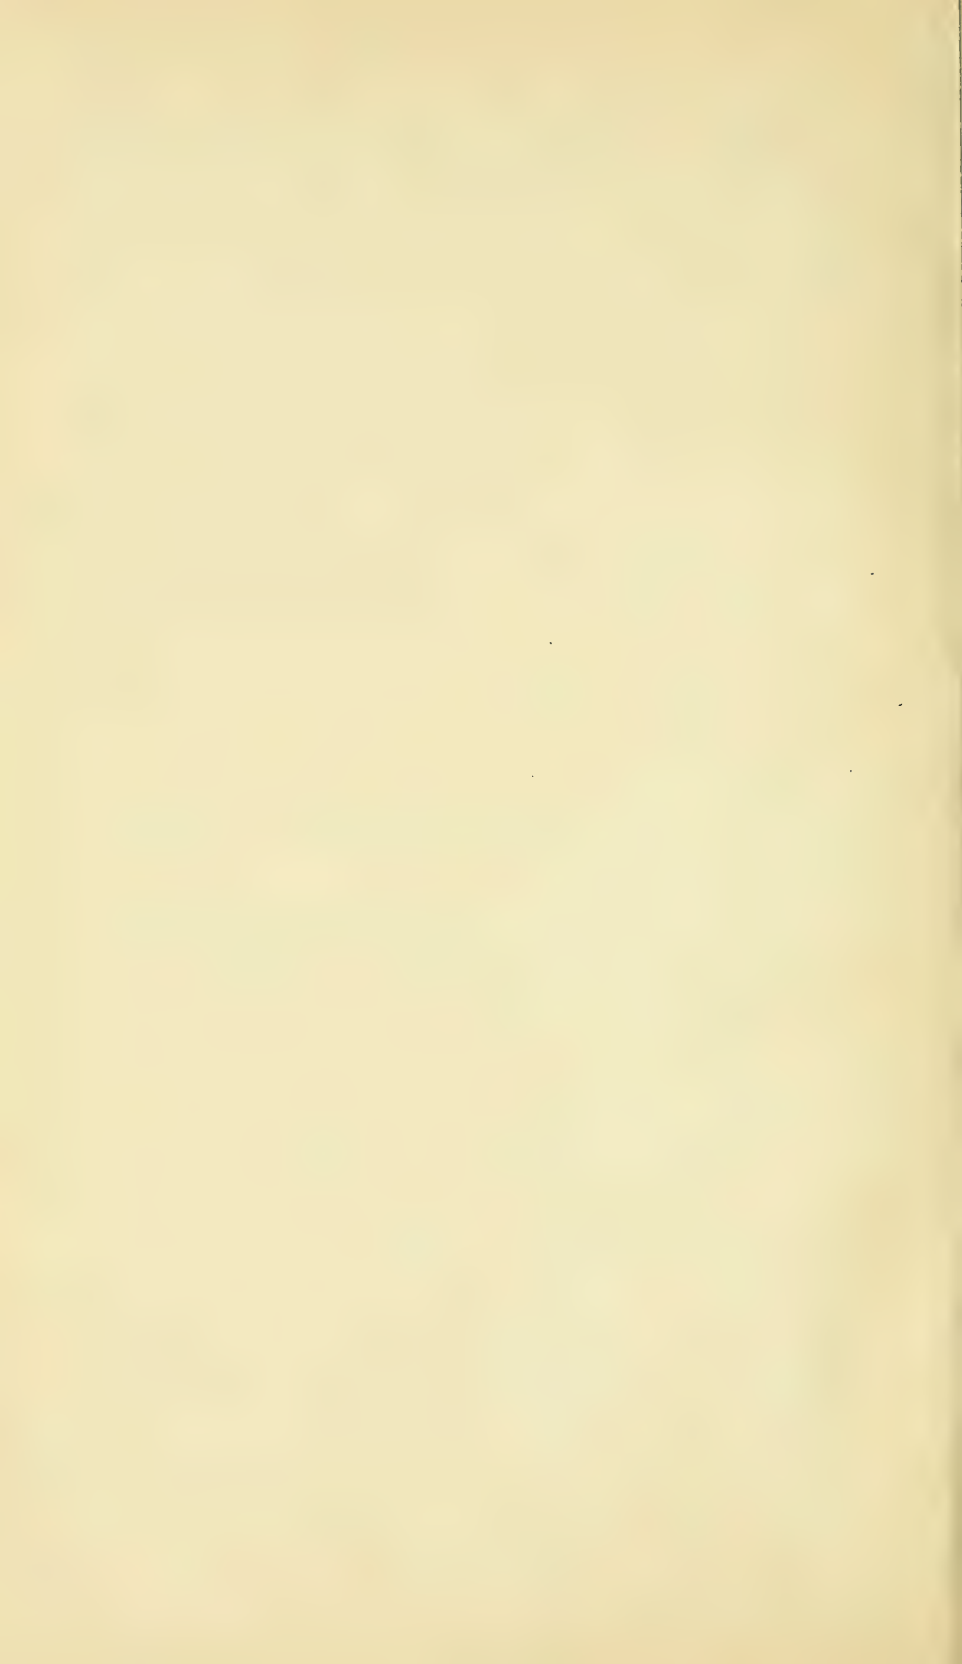

The enjoyment of the sea is much increased by the flourishing Cohasset Yacht Club, formed in 1894. Lovers of golf take much pleasure in the fine links of the Cohasset Golf Club on land of Mr. Henry M. Whitney on Lambert's Lane. In 1901 the town purchased a spacious ball field and recreation ground just below the reservoir on Pleasant Street. The Cyrus H. Bates Camp of Sons of Veterans, No. 140, was formed in 1908 with forty members and William H. Brown as commander.

The conduct of town meetings is much facilitated by the adoption of the Australian ballot in 1904. In 1907 the town sold its old almshouse on King Street, and built the modern and commodious Cohasset Home on Pond Street, which would be a credit to any town. The new Woodside Cemetery on North Main Street, next the Hingham line, was opened in 1902. New fire department houses have been built at North Cohasset (the Matthew Luce Hose) and in Beechwood. The interior of the First Parish Church has been carefully restored, replacing the antique columns with which it was originally ornamented.

Being somewhat distant from Boston, Cohasset develops its own village institutions and social life. The Literary Club, formed in 1890, has been a notable means of culture, and now, after an existence of eighteen years, is in a flourishing condition with more than fifty members. The Men's Club of Cohasset, formed in 1907, has now one hundred members, and uniting in a broad and liberal way the energies and resources of the citizens, will make for civic improvement and high standards of citizenship.

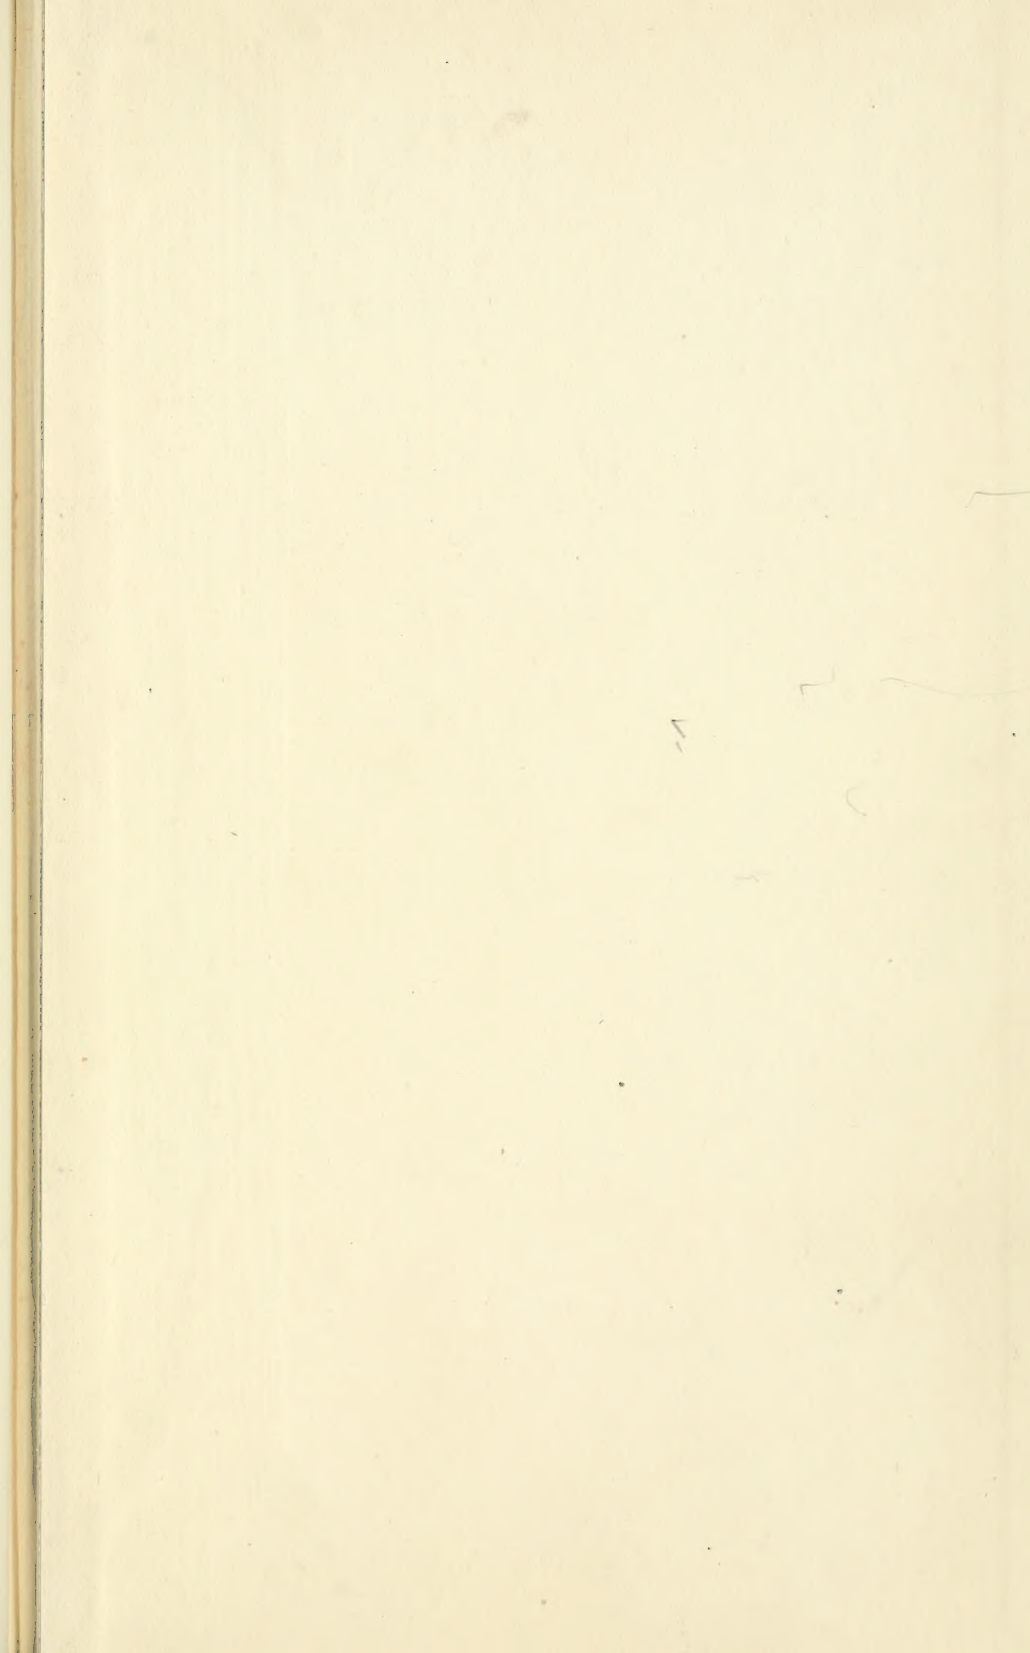

The town has had a steady growth: many new houses have been built, including one large settlement on Lincoln Hillside. All houses have become more comfortable by adoption of modern heating apparatus and plumbing. New summer cottages have also been built, many of which are placed in picturesque situations in our rocky woods. Our summer residents are making longer seasons here, and the summer house, being better furnished and equipped than formerly, is becoming more and more the real home. Some families originally here for the summer have made Cohasset their residence for the entire year. The influence and help of these new citizens in our winter social life is of decided benefit. Free from any disturbing elements to impair its value as a place of residence, combining a shore of wonderful interest with the rugged charm of woodland and cliff, Cohasset is the gem of the "South Shore," famous for its picturesqueness and its beauty.
